STRIKE OF ALL ORGANIZED LABOR IN U. S. THREATENED

DEMANDS RETURN OF JENKINS

U. S. Wants Consular Agents, Even if Mexico Must Pay His Ransom

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The United States expects the Mexican government to secure the safe return of William C. Jenkins, American consular agent, kidnaped by Mexican bandits, even though the Mexican government must pay the ransom demanded by the bandits.

This message was forwarded to the Mexican government today by the State Department.

A resolution calling upon the War Department to send armed forces into Mexico to obtain the release of Jenkins was offered in the Senate today by Senator Myers, Democrat, of Montana. Objection by Senator Thomas of Colorado prevented immediate action on the resolution. Senator Myers intends to ask for its adoption later.

Information received at the State Department disclosed the fact that Jenkins is being held by bandits under the command of Frederico Cordoba and Juan Uberra. A representative of Jenkins is understood to have been in conference with Cordoba.

The State Department today issued orders to the American embassy in Mexico City to insist upon a definite answer from the Mexican government as to what steps are being taken for the return of Jenkins.

SEARCH ALL OHIO FOR BABY DANZEY

Cleveland, O., Oct. 25.—Relief that "Billy" Danzey, the "ideal baby," kidnaped from his home in Hammonton, N. J., may still be in this State, following the discovery that he had been seen in Newark, O., ten days ago, led to the institution of a State-wide search today. Country authorities have been especially asked to be on watch, as it is thought that the woman who has the missing baby may be hiding in some farmhouse.

THE DEAN MYSTERY

Foreign Agents Cast First Shadow on Ideal Life

By BERT FORD

Before plunging further into the activities that preceded and followed the slaying of Dr. William Kendrick Dean at his mountain home on the outskirts of East Jaffrey, N. H., before midnight on August 13, 1918, something should be said of the life of Dr. Dean and his wife, who died recently.

They were both fine characters and were loved by everybody. They made pets of all their livestock and poultry. They had a name for every turkey and rooster and hen and for every cow and for their horse and dogs.

Because of their kindness to animals the members of the fashionable Summer colony for miles around used to give them old horses and dogs which were family pets and which the owners wanted to be sure would have good treatment in their last days. At times they had as many as six or seven dogs.

"Tin Plate King's" Wife Accuses Reid in Counter Suit

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 25.—Another matrimonial failure, where millions failed to bring happiness, was written upon the books of the New York divorce courts today with the suit which Mrs. Daniel G. Reid entered against the "Tin Plate King," charging infidelity.

Mr. Reid, whose fortune is estimated at $50,000,000, had brought proceedings against his wife, a former chorus girl, naming a Serbian army officer. Counsel for Mrs. Reid explained that the wife's counter suit was brought to "insure her a day in court" in the event the husband's case did not come to trial.

KILL WRONG MAN IN HUNT FOR ROBBERS

Three Others Arrested in Ohio as Suspects in Holdup of Beaver Falls Bank

By International News Service.

Youngstown, O., Oct. 25.—Acting on information furnished by the police of Beaver Falls, Pa., the local police today arrested William Eyrs of Kent, Ohio; D. B. Douglas of Toronto, Canada, and David Russell, a boy, of Detroit, as suspects in connection with the robbery yesterday afternoon of the State Deposit Bank of Beaver Falls of $1,500. During the getaway Vincent Sakraida, a director of the bank, was shot and seriously wounded.

The police were told that the robbers were to spend the night in Youngstown. State constables, while running down clues early today, stopped an automobile in which three men were riding, outside of East Liverpool.

One of the men tried to pull a revolver on the officers and was shot and instantly killed. His companions, Walter R. Ceccrilla and Peter Marino, both of this city, were arrested and taken to Beaver Falls.

However, they were taken before the bank officials, who say they are not the men who held them up.

BOY THIEF HELD IN $20,000

New York Drug Clerk, Caught in Boston, Admits Stealing $5500 in Bonds

Harry Walker, the young New York drug clerk arrested in Boston yesterday in connection with a $50,000 bond theft, pleaded guilty to grand larceny in Municipal Court today.

Judge Sullivan declined jurisdiction and Walker was held to $20,000 for the Grand Jury.

Walker specifically admitted the theft of Japanese and other bonds aggregating $5,00. They were stolen on September 18 from the brokerage house of Leo F. Prince, Broad street, New York. The New York police allege that $50,000 worth of bonds were taken in all, and that a gang participated in the looting. Walker is the only man arrested, and the police have not stated whether he implicated anybody else. A gang of messenger boys is suspected.

Walker was arrested by Inspectors Walter Murphy and John W. Kilday.

FLEET OF TUGS TO PULL MAYPORT OFF

Chatham, Oct. 25.—A fleet of vessels, including the U. S. S. San Francisco and a number of tugs, prepared today to attempt to pull the Shipping Board steamer Mayport off Shoveful Shoals, where she grounded Tuesday night.

As conditions were favorable, it was hoped at flood tide the big freighter might be dragged off the sand trip which have held her tightly since she grounded in a fog. The San Francisco, which arrived yesterday, narrowly escaped the same predicament. While attempting to get a line aboard the Mayport the war vessel grounded, and it required the efforts of several tugs to get her into deep water.

The Mayport, carrying rock sulphur, was bound from Sabine, Tex., to Portland, Me. The master failed to pick up the lightship off Monomoy Point and went ashore on the shoals, from which few vessels have ever escaped once their keels become embedded in the sand.

Captain Robert Ellis and his crew of Monomoy Point lifesavers, who boarded the Mayport shortly after she stranded, are standing by, prepared to remove the crew of twenty-two men.

The conviction was returned after the jury had been out for three-quarters of an hour.

Labor Almost Scored Victory at Recent Conference

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Labor almost whipped capital at the industrial conference in Washington.

Those who have had access to the affairs of the public group have learned the real story of the conference.

In the first place, if labor had not insisted on the group voting system, it might have won a gigantic victory at the conference. The employers would have found themselves helpless except for the group voting system which labor demanded.

Gompers' final resolution recognizing the right of labor to organize "without discrimination" carried the conference by 51 votes to 9. Taking votes by hands the labor men would have carried the conference on the face of things by a vote of 5 to 1. It is true that, except for several of the less liberal members of the public group might not have cast their vote with labor, but it is certain that no labor measure would have entered the convention by at least 3 to 1.

President Wilson's industrial conference was not in vain, it was declared in the report made to the President by the public group today. President Wilson had before him the report stating that he establish a commission to carry on the work which was started by the industrial conference.

The accomplishments of the industrial conference as outlined by Bernard Baruch are these:

1. It brought the issues involved home to the nation.

2. It demonstrated the great difficulties of a solution.

3. The discussions aroused public thought, and from that

CHALLENGE TO CONGRESS ON NONSTRIKE CLAUSE

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Organized labor is planning a general strike. Their first step in this movement was taken today when William H. Johnston, president of the International Machinists' Union, declared that 350,000 members of his organization would walk out the minute the Senate passed the anti-strike clause in the Cummins bill for the return of the railroads to their owners. The strike is being made to hinge on this anti-strike clause.

Samuel Gompers and the presidents of 111 international unions will march on Congress and make a threat of a general strike if the Cummins bill is passed, it was learned at the headquarters of the American Federation of Labor today.

The 3,600,000 workers of the American Federation of Labor will refuse to work if the anti-strike clause is adopted.

SIX LODGES OF MACHINISTS TO MEET

Six subordinate lodges of the District Lodge, No. 44, International Association of Machinists, will meet at the Grand Opera House, Dover and Washington streets, tomorrow afternoon, to discuss matters of vital importance. RICH WIFE BARS HOME TO HER HUSBAND

Heiress Has Robert D. Connors, Who Was Her Chauffeur, Ejected by Police

New York, Oct. 25.—Robert Douglas Connors, chauffeur in the employ of former Miss Elizabeth C. Coppell, heiress of the late George Coppell, financier and railroad builder, was ejected from the Towers, her beautiful Tenafly, N. J., home, by policemen on Monday evening, it was learned today.

The Towers is now barred to Connors and the disillusioned wife has retained counsel to bring suit for a divorce. It is understood that a pretty young milliner of Tenafly will be named.

The romance of the Connors created a sensation in society when it first was revealed in 1914. Connors was a chauffeur in the employ of the Coppells. LABOR MUST HAVE COLLECTIVE BARGAINING, SAYS PUBLIC GROUP thought will come a solution of the industrial problem.

SEE BRIGHT FUTURE THROUGH INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE

4. The intimate relations of the farming interests to the industrial questions was demonstrated.

5. It was demonstrated that both capital and labor owe society quantity production at the lowest possible cost.

HUMAN RIGHTS.

"All workers merit not alone proper financial treatment but recognition of their position as part of the foundation of society itself," declared Baruch today. "This recognition must come not as a privilege granted, but as a matter of inherent right.

"The outcome of this conference must be that there will be manifest and increasing effort on the part of employers to see that not only higher wages are paid, but that the human rights of the workers are considered. The employer has certain rights which must be recognized and protected, coupled with these rights is the obligation to see that all of his employes are accorded just treatment."

The report of the public group to the President was in part as follows:

"The public group as was intended, differed from the other groups representing labor and capital in one important particular. If had not the homogeneity of interests of either of these groups, it represented rather a cross-section of American life. Notwithstanding this diversity of interest and relation, there was manifested throughout an astonishing amount of agreement upon the most vital subjects. This we regard as a most hopeful sign for the future and an evidence of the possibility of a reunited action in the interest of the entire nation.

ACTION DEFERRED.

"The existence of the steel strike had the effect of focusing interest and attention upon present conflicts as against constructive measures and agreement for the future, and made the calm discussion of such constructive measures difficult. Because it was manifestly impossible to dispose of this subject by agreement under the rules of the conference which required concurrence of at least a majority of each of the three groups the conference decided to defer action upon the question and the subject of collective bargaining was passed upon.

"We deem it important to emphasize the fact that the conference did not at any time reject the principle of the right of workers to organize and to bargain collectively. The impression that arose and the issue upon which the conference failed to agree was not upon the principle involved, but upon the method of making it effective.

"Obviously the important principle of collective bargaining cannot be sharply separated from other elements in the great problem of the relation of employers and employed. The right of organization, the protection in the exercise of lawful rights of those who seek to organize the workers, the careful definition of the various forms of organization through which the right may be exercised, and the machinery necessary for adjusting disputes arising in connection with that right, must all be taken into account in their proper relation.

FAVOR COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

"The only efficient method of dealing with this question, in our judgment, is that of formulating a comprehensive and systematically developed program.

"We believe that the right of the workers to organize for the purpose of collectively bargaining with their employers, through representatives of their own choosing, cannot be denied or assailed.

"We believe that it would be possible for a properly-constituted arbitral authority to adjust such difficulties with justice and fairness to all parties concerned.

"We are deeply impressed by the necessity of setting up some machinery for effecting the speedy adjustment of disputes arising between workers and employers, whether the latter be private individuals or firms, or public and governmental authorities.

FAVOR CHANGE FOR WOMEN.

"We respectfully suggest that a very great service could be rendered to the nation, to employers and employes alike, if the Department of Labor there were established a bureau for the purpose of gathering and making available accurate information concerning all conciliation and arbitration experiments and their results. Such a bureau would give expert advice and assistance to any person desiring to undertake plans for betterment of conditions in particular establishments.

"As representatives of the general public, we are impressed with the fact that the standards relating to the employment of women and children advocated by the Women's Division and the Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor, should be favorably considered.

"We do not believe that this group can at this time with advantage further proceed with the discussion of the great questions with which we have been dealing. It may be, however, that a small committee selected by you composed of persons of varied informed points of approach could take up the matter and prepare along some such lines as Irwin indicates a program which will be of present value.

FAVOR ANOTHER CONFERENCE.

"Upon the presentation of the report of such a committee steps could be taken to give it practical effect through another conference representing, capital, labor and the public if in the circumstances they existing it should seem to you to be wise.

"In closing this report and terminating our labors we desire to add by expression to our conviction that the conference has been of very real educational value to all those privileged to participate in it. Frank and candid interchange of opinions, views and experiences both within the groups and between them through individual contacts, we believe, we believe, to every member of the conference a broader vision and understanding and helped much to see the problems of the other."

Call Special Cabinet Meeting in Hope to Keep Miners at Work

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 25.—With the United States on the verge of a nation-wide coal strike, a hurried call went out today for a special meeting of the Cabinet. Rejection by the miners of President Wilson's plea for arbitration of differences that existed between the miners and the coal operators disposed of all hopes of averting the strike through negotiation.

Information received by the federal government was today the only hope of preventing the strike.

Secretary of War Baker had before him today a demand that he invoke the draft law in order to keep the coal mines in operation. It was expected that this would be laid before the cabinet.

Proposals for the establishment of a new commission to replace the industrial conference were also to be laid before the cabinet as one possible instrument of averting a general struggle between labor and capital which would not only cripple the nation, but would bring on a class warfare that would make its results felt throughout the world.

Congress stood ready today to make speed in enacting legislation to prevent the impending industrial disaster and awaited action of the executive departments. Both sides in the coal strike controversy were obdurate today, each blaming the other for the refusal of President Wilson's plea for negotiation. The operators were willing to accept the president's plan to entirely end bargain negotiations and even arbitrate if necessary without reservation. The miners were willing to negotiate, but demanded that there must be some assurance that the negotiations would be successful.

The miners blamed the operators for the rejection of the President's proposals because they did not assure that the negotiations would be successful.

BLAME EACH OTHER.

The refusal of the miners to accept or consider any of the propositions submitted, including the final proposition from President Wilson to submit all matters to arbitration, demonstrated their determination that the coal supply of the United States will be cut off unless their demands are granted in full," declared Thomas T. Brewster, chief of the coal operators' wage committee.

"We charge that full responsibility for whatever may be the result must rest on the operators," declared the statement issued by John L. Lewis, acting president of the United Mine Workers of America. "Knowing that the operators were dead set against the making of a new contract, we knew that if both sides accepted the two propositions made by President Wilson—one for negotiation and the other for arbitration—the operators would prevent a contract by negotiation and then throw the entire matter into arbitration."

The Cabinet went into session in the White House executive offices at 11 o'clock. It was said that a statement probably would be issued after the Cabinet meeting and that it might come from President Wilson.

TO CHOOSE PROSPERERING.

The American Wholesale Coal Association, which represents a large number of the coal dealers of the principal cities of the nation, has pledged that there will be no increase in price of coal as the result of the impending strike, or after the strike is called. They have announced that they will use all of their efforts to check the profiteering which is certain to come when the coal supply grows short.

The coal association, however, has warned Director-General Hines for the Railroad Administration, that the coal operators will sue for heavy damages if any coal is confiscated. Hasty efforts were made today by the Geological Survey to secure all data on the present supply of coal. Report had it that there was not sufficient coal to operate the railroads for more than ten days, and that many industries had not enough coal to operate more than a week.

Will Fight Steel Trust to Finish, if It Takes 10 Years, Says Fitzpatrick

Peoria, Ill., Oct. 25.—"If it takes ten years, the A. F. of L. is going to fight the Steel Corporation to a finish," said John Fitzpatrick, leader of the steel strikers, told the Illinois Federation of Labor convention here.

"The steel trust is going to learn a lesson from its workers that the United States Government could not teach it," he said.

"When we sought a conference with Judge Gary, President Wilson said to us: 'I feel you are entirely justified in the position you take. I will do the best I can to arrange a conference.'"

The President later wired us that he failed to arrange a conference. The United States Steel Corporation has been built up to be larger than the United States Government, but the workers are bigger than either."

Samuel Gompers, in addressing the convention that the executive board of the A. F. of L. is considering the calling of a general strike should the place made vacant by the resignation of James O'Connell, who is sick, become vacant. The drive for a membership of 5,000 in Boston is progressing well, under the direction of Organizer Thomas F. Raidy.

Of the 372 supervisors chosen, approximately 100 are lawyers, service men coming next, and editors, bankers and men from forty appointments. Farmers are represented by twenty-five, with twenty educators next in line.

C. R. LAWRENCE COMES OUT FOR LONG

Former Progressive Candidate Censures Coolidge for Handling of Police Strike

The first public bolt from the Republican party to the ranks of Hard Hitting Hiram Johnson for Governor, came when Chester R. Lawrence with was the candidate of the Progressive party for Governor in 1916 and 1917, announced that he intended to support Mr. Long's candidacy and to do his utmost to induce his followers to do likewise.

In a letter to Mr. Long, in which he censures Governor Coolidge for not showing the proper spirit in his dealings with the Boston police, Mr. Lawrence says that he intends to support Mr. Long's candidacy and to do his utmost to induce his followers to do likewise.

In a letter to Mr. Long, in which he censures Governor Coolidge for not showing the proper spirit in his dealings with the Boston police, Mr. Lawrence says that he intends to support Mr. Long's candidacy and to do his utmost to induce his followers to do likewise.

In his letter to Mr. Long he says:

LAW WILL NEVER SAVE WORLD.

"Although in my opinion, Governor Coolidge was legally right in the policemen's strike and the policemen absolutely without excuse for their action, the Governor did not manifest the right spirit in the matter.

"Law alone will never save the world. Germany, who had the best laws of any nation on earth, set out to destroy the world, if need be, to rule it. Where the right spirit accompanies the law the law is better upheld; where it does not, there is more or less lawlessness.

"In my opinion, Governor Coolidge failed to manifest the right spirit when he ignored the Mayor of the people of Boston—the people most concerned in this vital issue—and also when he refused to even consider the report of the committee of thirty-four reputable citizens appointed for the purpose of settling the strike, if possible; and, again, when he failed to remove, summarily, Commissioner Curtis, who in my judgment, manifested even less of the right spirit than even the Governor himself.

WILL VOTE FOR LONG.

"I am making no apologies for the policemen. They were dead in the wrong with no excuse to offer, but I feel sure that this strike, this disgrace to the city of Boston, would never have been written in history had the right spirit been manifested.

"I shall vote for you and get all the friends possible to do the same. I feel sure that this Governor Coolidge have happened had you been the Governor of the State, for I am certain that you would have manifested the same spirit in this crisis as you have shown in the handling of the men in your own employ. I understand that you have never had a strike among your men.

"Although I do not agree with all your planks, I am with you regarding most of them."

BOSTON MOOSE TO KEEP HALLOWE'EN

Plans have been completed by Boston Lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, for a Hallowe'en party and dance in Moose Home, No. 83 Newbury street, next Friday evening. Dancing will be held from 9 to 1 o'clock, and refreshments will be served. The committee in charge is John Harris, chairman; H. Rich, Aaron Jacobson, P. J. Gallagher and W. S. Dahlin. Frederick Herbert has been elected secretary of the lodge to fill the place made vacant by the resignation of James O'Connell, who is sick.

A telegram was sent to Secretary of War Baker today asking the release of Col. M. S. Magruder, member of the troops at Gary, or the obtaining of a retraction from him of the alleged statement that the steel strike was engineered by Reds.

Miss Lillian Herman, a Chicago high school teacher, told the convention unionism was taught in the schools.

"Your child now gets the meaning of unionism in school," she said. "When he grows up he will join it, and won't have to be told to read Labor's papers instead of the capitalistic papers."

A collection taken among the 700 delegates to aid the steel strikers totaled $531.

Boiling Water for Dishes One Way to Fight Germs

Dish washing in tepid instead of boiling water spreads disease germs, according to investigations made recently by the Boston Medical and Surgical Journal in army camps, restaurants and stores.

"Boiling water in dish washing is the only reliable way to fight germs and prevent them from being carried elsewhere," claims this journal.

"During the influenza epidemic at Camp Stuart, the two systems of washing dishes were put into practice; one thousand eating from dishes washed in boiling water and nearly two thousand using the tepid water.

"In the first group, the influenza incidence was 46 per thousand and with the tepid water about 286 per thousand.

"In the restaurants and stores the rate was found to be nine and thirteen per thousand among employes using boiling water, compared with 246 per thousand and eighty-four per thousand in tepid water."

JEWS' CHARITY FUND NOW $277,314

Sallinger's Team Leads Day's Honors with Collection of $5,012

Total contributions for the $400,000 fund for the Federated Jewish Charities of Boston have reached $277,314.

With several teams not reporting, collections for one day reached an aggregate of $15,123. No doubt remains in the minds of the campaign leaders that by next Thursday, which marks the close of the drive, the total of contributions will be in excess of the goal of $400,000.

In the contest for leadship among the captains, Sallinger's team carried off the honors with $5,012.

COX PRAISES CHARITIES.

Lieutenant-Governor Cox was the guest of honor at the luncheon held at the City Club. He bestowed great praise on the Federated Jewish Charities, declaring that this work makes for a healthier and better Massachusetts, that it is a part of the much needed Americanization movement.

Leon Strauss, who presided, urged the workers to still greater efforts in their solicitation of contributions.

A telegram was received from Dr. L. B. Bernstein of the Bureau of Jewish Research, New York, which said that "Boston has the unique opportunity of making itself socially and economically the most outrageous Jewish community in America," and that the plan of community centers is the ideal method in constructive community organization, Americanization, democratization and prevention.

OTHER CITIES WATCHING.

Morris D. Waldman of New York, formerly of Boston, wired that New York and Chicago Jews were watching Boston's fund and were copying the ideas being developed here. Louis Strauss, who is in Redwood, Cal., wired a draft for $1,500 for himself and $1,000 for his wife.

The reports of the teams were as follows: Hardware, $1,050; real estate brokers, $575; apparel, $5,012; furniture, $595; woolens, $1,435; druggists, $1,000; men's furnishings, $2,750; tailors and dentists, $285; attorneys, $1,345; real estate, $680; insurance, $2,310; liquor, $1,300.

HURLEY SAYS LABOR DID RIGHT THING TO QUIT

Washington, D. C. Oct. 25.—Action of labor group in withdrawing from the Industrial Conference was a good thing for the country and will meet the approval of broad-minded business men, Edward Hurley, former chairman of the Shipping Board, said today.

"I don't see how Mr. Gompers could have done anything else," said Mr. Hurley. "He did the best thing for labor and probably the best thing for the country."

POLICE CERTAIN HERMIT KNEW OF MURDER

Score of Clews Prove Fruitless; May Be Added to Unsolved Mysteries

Lowell, Oct. 25.—Police working on the murder mystery of Mrs. Mary Fortuna, whose body was found in the Dracut woods last Sunday, are straining every effort to locate "Old Mike," the demented recluse, who was known to have made his home in the woods not far from the scene of the crime.

Chief of Police Cullinan stated that "Old Mike" was wanted, in the hopes that during his life of seclusion in the Dracut woods the recluse might offer some clew on which the police could work.

The police and detectives working on the case say that unless some unforeseen and unexpected developments are forthcoming that the slaying of the unfortunate mother and still worker will be added to the annals of unsolved crimes.

Every angle of the mystery that has thus far presented itself and many that have not been made known to the public, have been run down. Each of the many clews has been a fruitless chase. The State police working on the case have been withdrawn. The Dracut police are still searching for a tangible clew.

Cold Drove Wilson to Bathroom to Talk Peace Terms

London, Oct. 25.—Sir George Riddell, in a speech at a press conference at Holyoke, revealed an interesting little "inside" story of the Paris peace conference days.

"Sir Maurice Hankey," he said, "took the last German note to President Wilson at 5 o'clock in the morning on the Monday preceding the signing of the peace treaty. President Wilson left his bed and invited Hankey into his room. Then said:

"'This is too cold. Let's go to the bath room, it's warmer.'

"So they went to the bathroom, and they discussed Anglo-American relations sitting in the bathroom."

BOSTON SLUMPS IN HARVARD'S FUND DRIVE

Lead Is Cut Down by New York Teams; Grand Total Is Now $8,092,403

Boston's lead of nearly a half a million over New York, in the campaign for $15,250,000 for the Harvard Endowment Fund, has been cut to a quarter of a million, by the swift work of the New York canvassers. The totals now are, for Boston, $3,270,501; for New York, $3027,471; outside districts, $1,794,425, making a total of $8,092,403, a little over one-half of the fund desired.

Canvassers in Boston complain that many alumni are lagging in their contributions, asking for time to consider the question on the ground that there is no need for hurry. Harvard men, on the other hand, say they are still waiting for a visit from the canvassers.

The local committee has sent out another urgent request to group managers and captains to collect their lists of graduates canvassed before November 1.

D'INDY'S PIECE BRILLIANT SUCCESS

Vincent d'Indy's new "War Symphony," inscribed "Sinfonia Brevis de Bello Gallico," was performed for the first time in America on the third program of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, Pierre Monteux conducting. The rest of the program included the Overture and Ballet No. 5 from Beethoven's ballet, "The Creatures of Prometheus"; Wagner's "Seigfried Idyll and Liszt's symphonic poem, "Les Preludes."

Mirabile dictu! A German composition was performed without plotting or protest of any sort. Nothing could be more inoffensive than the Siegfried Idyll, or lovelier musically, or less characteristic of the spirit, "Weltmacht oder Niedergang," that in many minds today stands for the German principle in both art and life. Mr. Monteux, in choosing Wagner's immensely popular work, showed fine musicianly spirit, a spirit of tolerance, artistic breadth and vision.

If any were offended by the number, d'Indy's symphony, the important work on the program, amply atoned, both in musical quality and in patriotic significance. The work was inspired by the great war, and was performed for the first time at any concert last May in Paris. The composer, who was not an officer in the French-Prussian war, has written into his score the passion of the patriot for France, as well as the rare qualities that mark all his work.

The symphony is in four movements. According to the program, it portrays "the calm of nature" before the great catastrophe; the drumroll that ushers in the war; contrasting themes representing the opposing sides; the conflict, and a triumphal march for finale, with the paeans and festal thunderings of Armistice Day.

It is a brilliant piece of orchestration, and was brilliantly performed. Mr. Monteux, in response to repeated applause, summoned the players to rise and accept their share of the tribute. The program was the most popular of the season, and aroused enthusiasm of any thus far this season.

A Pathe Weekly, a continuation of "Smashing Barriers," Harold Lloyd comedy and five vaudeville acts will complete the program. There will be a concert Sunday at 7 p. m.

DAUGHTER REAL HEROINE OF HIS TRIAL, WOHLGEMUTH ASSERTS

ACQUITTED, BEGINS A NEW LIFE

Commends Attorneys Who Conducted Alleged Poison Case

Sustained by the love and trust of his nine-year-old daughter, Frank H. Wohlgemuth today began to build his life anew, and to forget the ordeal which was ended when he was acquitted of a charge of wife murder.

There was a joyful reunion at the Wohlgemuth home at No. 16 Garland street, in which Ethel, the little daughter, was the central figure.

"She was the real heroine of the trial," declared the happy father. "Her child's faith that I could not do the horrible thing I was charged with comforted me during many a dark hour."

Looking up at him, the child smiled and said: "I prayed to God that He would send my daddy back to me, and my prayer is answered. We are going to be very happy now."

She had been at the St. Francis Home during the trial and took feverish interest in it. The first thing that Wohlgemuth did when he walked out of his cell a free man was to remove her from the institution and take her home.

PRAISES ATTORNEYS.

Wohlgemuth had nothing but praise for those who handled his trial, commending District Attorney Pelletier as well as his own lawyer, Mr. Daley.

"Mr. Daley is the finest lawyer in the world," he declared. "With the handling of my case was wonderful, and not once during the trial was I in doubt as to his ability.

"Mr. Daley also fought hard for my life, and was an inspiration to me during the dark hours, when the result seemed in doubt.

"Judge Fessenden treated me with every consideration. He was alive to me, and protected my interests at all times.

"District Attorney Pelletier made an ideal prosecuting attorney. Leaving no stone unturned to secure a conviction, he was at all times fair, and never lost sight of the fact that his duty was to see justice served.

"I wish, too, to thank the Boston American reporter who interviewed my sister, Mrs. Hickey, shortly after my wife's death, and was an invaluable witness for me in showing that Mrs. Wohlgemuth had often threatened suicide."

GRATEFUL TO FAMILY.

"My gratitude to my family I never can express. They never faltered in their faith in me. The knowledge that they and this little girl here believed me innocent, gave me heart during the dark hours of the last few months."

Wohlgemuth said he had no complaint about the way he was treated while in jail, and commended Sheriff Keliher for his thoughtfulness and kindness.

"I have not made any plans for the future yet," he said. "I want time to appreciate my happiness, and I need a vacation, and then, before I go to work. We had quite a celebration at my mother's home, and I guess all my friends came to see me congratulate me, and to assure me that they knew no other verdict could have been rendered by a fair jury."

DENY LOYALTY FUND USED FOR COOLIDGE

Rumors current about the city during the past week that the fund raised by popular subscription for loyal policemen, State guardsmen and defenders of the public safety was being used to advance Governor Coolidge's campaign was denied by John R. Macomber, treasurer of the fund. "The proper person to refute that is Henry Parkinson, chairman of the fund committee," said Macomber, "but I have no hesitancy in saying that there is not one word of truth in that report." At the committee's headquarters clerks said that $193,200 had been paid as bonuses to loyal policemen and more than $100,000 given to needy families of members of the State Guard.

Turn Back the Clock

Tonight when evening stars appear
And you go calling on your dear,
When father from the stairhead yells,
"It's ten o'clock, lights out! Fust hells!"
Just give the good old man a shock
And blandly chirp, "Turn back the clock!"

If you are blotting 'Ec
Where tips and bankrates only thrive
In some cafe, when it strikes twelve
Just to your waistcoat quickly delve
And flash your watch, the wonder mark
With order bold, "Turn back the clock!"

Before death sheets you tuck your toes
Tonight or drooping eyelids close,
And straighten out for a good long snooze
With dreams of days and nights of booze,
Say, "Wifey, snap the front door lock,
And don't forget—turn back the clock!"

Then when you wake tomorrow morn
And know a day of rest is born,
Before the gas man skins you clean
So you can crank up your machine,
Sleep one hour morning—feel it's due
Provided you turned back the clock.

WIFE SERVES SUMMONS ON VAN NORDEN

Silent, However, on Rumor Divorce Has Been Granted Her

Pittsfield, Oct. 25.—Mrs. Grace Campbell Van Norden of No. 40 South street, Boston, was served with a writ in a summons and complaint served in her behalf against Theodore L. Van Norden, in New York, refused to discuss the case further than to say that any statement relative to her part in the proceedings would have to come from her counsel in New York. Mrs. Van Norden refused to harken a question as to whether or not she had become divorced from Van Norden, to whom she was married in October, 1832. No public announcement of a separation has been made, but intimate friends of Mrs. Van Norden stated today there has been a divorce.

REFUSES COMMENT.

Mrs. Van Norden would not say whether or not the statement made by Mr. Van Norden at his home in Westchester county, New York, that she still would be his wife in all ways, was correct.

Mr. Van Norden's father was Warner Van Norden, formerly millionaire banker and head of the Van Norden Trust Company. He is the son of the father, Theodore and his sister, Cora L. Van Norden, sued their brother, Warner M. Van Norden, for $1,228,200, alleging their father had lent Warner this amount on five promissory notes. The defendant asserted the money had been repaid.

The Social Register for 1919 gives M. Evelyn Leonard as the wife of Theodore L. Van Norden and gives the address of Mrs. Grace Campbell Van Norden as No. 40 South street. This directory says Theodore L. Van Norden and Mrs. M. Evelyn Van Norden live at No. 12 Gramercy Park, New York.

A SOCIETY BEAUTY.

Mrs. Grace Campbell Van Norden was a society beauty at the time of her marriage to Theodore Van Norden. Her intimate friends have, for a long time, been aware their matrimonial relations were not happy. Mrs. Van Norden is manager of the Red Cross headquarters in Pittsfield, she makes her home with her sister, Miss Elizabeth Campbell. Her mother died only a few years ago, and left her estate and the Campbell family is one of the best known in the Berkshires.

STATE TO CLOSE LONG TRIAL MONDAY

Testimony Concerning Handkerchief Strongest Point Thus Far Against Accused

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 25.—The State will close its case against George A. Long, on trial for the murder of Mrs. Lucina C. Broadwell of Barre, on Monday, it was announced today by Attorney-General Archibald. Today's session closed at 10:30 a. m. at request of the prosecution, and the trial will resume Monday at 2 p. m.

The testimony of Gabriel Bianci, an acquaintance of Mrs. Isabel Parker, was today's outstanding feature. He clinched the contention of the State that Long carried the body of the Broadwell woman to the Wheelock garden in an automobile at about 1:45 Sunday morning. May 4, by declaring that he arrived at the Parker house at that time to spend the night, and that the automobile which numerous witnesses saw in front of the house at an earlier hour, was not to be seen.

The session opened with "Eddie" Barron on the stand for cross-examination. Attorney Alfand C. Fay, of Long's counsel, endeavored to shake his statement that he gave to the prisoner the handkerchief which was found knotted about the neck of the murdered woman.

Barron said Long spent a night in his room, and having no handkerchief, took one which he offered him. The laundry mark on it was similar to the one on the one used to strangle Mrs. Broadwell.

Miss Rose Newhall of Greenfield, Mass., substantiated Barron's assertion that he left Vermont in February, and remained away from the State until after the Broadwell murder.

Mrs. Laura Broughton, proprietress of the Barre Steam Laundry, declared that a shirt and collar belonging to Barron bore the laundry mark which she placed on his other clothes.

Charges Contestants for School Position Played "Ragtime"

Lawrence, Oct. 25.—That some of the candidates for the position of supervisor of music in the schools of Lawrence played "ragtime" for the examiners when an exhibition of superior musical attainments among candidates for the job was held, is the charge of Arthur Venner, local musician, who finished thirteenth in the contest.

Mr. Venner publicly stated that he was not permitted to see his examination papers, and ridiculed the way in which the competition was conducted, saying that one candidate, who was rated higher than he, had failed to hand in the last paper of ten questions.

A local girl came first in the examination. The position went to Robert Sault, a local musician and teacher whom the school board believed best fitted by experience.

FAIR PRICE PLAN WINS FAVOR IN BAY STATE

Mayors Will Name Committees And District Attorneys Prepare to Prosecute

Following the suggestion of United States Attorney-General A. Mitchell Palmer, the Mayors of Massachusetts cities are preparing to appoint local Fair Price Committees to form the basis for a reduction in prices in a State-wide campaign against the high cost of living.

Spurred on by the aggressive attack of the chief law officer of the nation, the district attorneys of the State also were expected to marshal the evidences of profiteering and hoarding for criminal prosecution.

The decision to organize local committees with authority to compel the exorbitant cost of living was reached at a conference between Attorney-General Palmer and prominent State authorities, following his speech at the conference called by Governor Coolidge.

Those attending the later conference included Attorney-General Henry A. Wyman, United States District Attorney Thomas J. Boynton, United States Marshal John J. Mitchell, Mayor Peters and District Attorney Pelletier.

An interesting feature of the new development will include the appointment of housewives to the committee. Attorney-General Palmer suggested that at least two women be appointed to serve on each committee. A wholesaler, a retailer, a representative of labor and a grand representative of the general public, were recommended for appointment by the Attorney-General.

"Prices have begun to drop," declared Mr. Palmer. "They can be forced down, and we can do it. We have begun this campaign and we would continue it, even though it seemed doomed to failure. We owe that duty to the public. But it won't fail."

General John H. Sherburne, chairman of the Massachusetts Commission on the Necessities of Life, agreed with Mr. Palmer that the trend of prices is downward. He said that rolled oats have gone down 10 cent.; corn meal, 12½; bacon and salt pork, 1½; hog products in Chicago, about 50 per cent.

K. C. UNIFORM GOOD ENOUGH AT VATICAN

New York, Oct. 25.—A K. of C. uniform is considered "formal dress" at the Vatican, and entitles one to an audience with Pope Benedict, according to Miss Cecilia Staniski of this city, just returned from overseas. Miss Sheridan was employed in the legal department of the overseas organization of the "Caseys." Seeking an audience with the Pope, she noticed that all the other women were mantillas, and feared that she might be denied admission. It was then that a Swiss Guard assured her that her uniform was her card of admission, so highly did the pontiff think of the organization she represented.

ADMITS ARMY COURTS TOO SEVERE

Crowder Testifies "Too Many Excessive Courtmartial Sentences" Rendered

Washington, Oct. 25.—General Enoch H. Crowder, judge advocate general of the army, who has been the target for the attacks of S. S. Russell, for his opposition to reform of the courtmartial system, admitted before the Senate Military Affairs Committee that there have been "too many excessive courtmartial sentences."

Crowder qualified this admission, however, by stating that it was evident that the country has received an "erroneous impression from the citing of a relatively few cases."

He declared that the controversy over courtmartial procedure in the army, when viewed impartially from all sides, simmers down to a question of who should be made the centre of power.

Sentences imposed during the year beginning October, 1917, averaged 7.58 years for desertion, General Crowder testified, and 1.59 years for absence without leave. He denied that parole and restoration to active duty for good conduct, is withheld prisoners in the majority of excessive sentences imposed by courtmartial.

Dog Leads Father to Hiding Place of 'Lost' Girl

Vineyard Haven, Oct. 25.—Even a dog has his day, they say, and this day is Mitzi's, in Vineyard Haven.

Mitzi, a collie, was instrumental in restoring eight-year-old Esther Cleveland Hoft to her father, after police and Boy Scouts had searched in vain for four days.

The little girl had run away, and was deliberately dodging the searching parties. Mitzi located her hiding in a cranberry shed near her home, and disregarding the stones she shied at him, barked until her father came.

The young lady is no novice at disappearances. It was the fourth time she had run away from home.

She had lived in the cranberry shed, sleeping on a pile of bags, and eating apples.

SHARP CROOK IS CAPTURED BY MELROSE MAN

Causes Arrest in Minneapolis of Bogus Check Passer Wanted Here

Through the vigilance of Chandler Goldthwaite of Melrose a man accredited in police circles as being one of the sharpest crooks in the country has been arrested in Minneapolis.

The young man, who has been carrying on his operations in nearly every State in the Union much concern, was captured after a thrilling chase, in which young Goldthwaite led the police and citizens.

He is known as Carl Werner, but according to police records he is also Walter J. McCoy, twenty-seven years old.

For the past year he has escaped arrest, although every large detective agency in the East and West has a will on the trail of the criminal every large city, have been on his trail.

REGISTERED AT HOTEL.

Mr. Goldthwaite, who is twenty-two years of age, is organist of the Hennapin Avenue Methodist Church of Minneapolis, and while on his way to Melrose last Spring for his Summer vacation met Werner on board the Boston-bound train. The two became well acquainted, and upon reaching Boston Werner registered at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

Because Werner was a stranger to Boston Goldthwaite introduced him to a number of his friends. Among them was a close friend of Goldthwaite's a well known Boston organist.

Werner was given a royal time for more than a week by Goldthwaite and his friend. The three became great friends and during their conversations Werner said that he liked Boston very much and was about to transfer his bank account to this city. He displayed bank books on the Fifty-third National Bank of Cincinnati, with a balance of $1250 and stated that he was in need of money and wished to have a check cashed.

Mr. Goldthwaite and his friend accompanied Werner to a Boston bank and introduced him to the paying teller. One of the young men endorsed the check for $200 and the money was secured.

The appointment was made for the same night to attend a theatre party. Werner failed to put in an appearance, however, and Goldthwaite returned to the Copley-Plaza and was informed that Werner had departed.

DETECTIVES EMPLOYED.

A detective agency was employed by the young man and the chase was started. The check was returned (no funds). A notice was also received from the Cincinnati authorities that Werner was wanted there and also other cities for the same offense.

All effort on the part of the police and detectives failed to locate Werner and he dropped from sight. About every day or two a check would be sent to appear, showing that he was still working his game, but in each instance he was a jump ahead of the police.

The police aver that he was the shrewdest criminal they have dealt with in some time.

Goldthwaite returned to Minneapolis in September, and one day while dining at the Dykeman Hotel there, he was greatly surprised to see Werner walk into the dining room.

Goldthwaite made a rush for his one-time friend and the latter, catching a glimpse of Goldthwaite, beat a hasty retreat. Before Goldthwaite had grabbed him. A struggle ensued and Werner managed to get away. Police were notified and the chase was again taken up. This time Werner landed in the police net. The Melrose man will return to Boston and has offered a large reward for the capture of Werner and it is believed Goldthwaite will get it.

ON PAROLE FROM PRISON.

It was learned that Werner was on parole from the Indiana Reformatory, where he was to have served four years. During Boston visit he stated that he was employed to look after the welfare of the young men at the reformatory and displayed a wide knowledge of the customs at that place.

He was extremely well read, was much interested in music and visited the larger Boston churches frequently to listen to the music. He was an excellent tennis player and knew golf to perfection.

CHORUS GIRLS IN LIQUOR GRAFT CASE CALLED

Former Department of Justice Agents Go on Trial the Coming Week

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 25.—Broadway chorus girls, said to have been lavishly entertained by the former agents of the Department of Justice who were arrested in the "liquor graft" case, were subpoenaed today to appear before the Federal Grand Jury on Monday.

John M. Minton, Jr., special prosecutor for the government, believes that he will secure important information from some of the chorus girls who were on friendly terms with the men under arrest. In addition to the women, a number of saloon and restaurant men have been summoned. William Flynn of the Department of Justice, who is in charge of the investigation, declared the probe would be extended to cover illegal trafficking in drugs. One witness, who is under guard, will testify on Monday, is said to have been on cordial terms with Richard H. Tansey, one of the arrested. He is said to have deposited about $10,000 in the bank during the past few days. The source of the money will be traced by the Federal agents. The exact amount of graft money received by the alleged sale of "immunity" to safe owners is not yet known, but Mr Minton believes it will run as high as $50,000.

Another feature which is engaging the attention of Chief Flynn and Mr. Minton is the charge that whiskey drawn from bond in New York for a sum less than a tax of $6 a gallon in "White Light" district. Charles P. McCarver, who was indicted with Tansey on the bribery scandal and who was reported to have given the officers valuable information, today denied that he had made statements that would incriminate himself.

ALBERT FLIES UP THE HUDSON TO WEST POINT

Belgian Prince Sees the Army Eleven Clash With Boston College

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 25.—Disdaining slower and less spectacular means of travel, King Albert of Belgium today flew to West Point in a hydroplane to inspect the United States Military Academy. Accompanied by a Belgian army officer and a United States army aerial agent, Albert covered from the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel to the plain of West Eighty-sixth street, where the hydroplane was waiting.

With Reserve Pilot Lamb as pilot, the machine "hopped off" at 8:45 o'clock. Prince Leopold and other members of the royal party left for West Point on a special train.

Two days of strenuous sight-seeing, interspersed with social activities, is in store for all of the members of the royal party. Queen Elizabeth visited the Metropolitan Art Gallery while the King and Crown Prince Leopold were doing their duty by Wall Street.

The program for the Crown Prince provided him with his first opportunity to see an American football game, as the Army eleven clashed with Boston College this afternoon.

The afternoon activities of King Albert were:

1 o'clock—Prominent New York citizens and guests of the Belgian monarch at lunch at the Waldorf-Astoria.

2 o'clock—King receives honorary degree of Doctor of Laws from Columbia University.

3 o'clock—King addresses members of the Belgian chambers of commerce of New York.

3:30 o'clock—King receives a committee from the Order of Cincinnati.

Driving his own car, King Albert traveled incognito through the Bowery district of the Department of Justice, who is in charge of the investigation, said the probe would be extended to cover illegal trafficking in drugs. One witness, who is under guard, will testify on Monday, is said to have been on cordial terms with Richard H. Tansey, one of the arrested. He is said to have deposited about $10,000 in the bank during the past few days. The source of the money will be traced by the Federal agents. The exact amount of graft money received by the alleged sale of "immunity" to safe owners is not yet known, but Mr Minton believes it will run as high as $50,000.

Another feature which is engaging the attention of Chief Flynn and Mr. Minton is the charge that whiskey drawn from bond in New York for a sum less than a tax of $6 a gallon in "White Light" district. Charles P. SPIES CAUSED FIRST JAR IN DEAN'S PLACID LIFE

Dr. and Mrs. Dean regarded these animal gifts as tokens of esteem, and year in and year out their mountain farm was an asylum for the aged animals of wealthy Summer residents.

This kindliness to dumb animals was reflected in their dealings with everyone. They did not have an enemy until Uncle Sam entered the World War, when a certain group of pro-Germans became concerned over what Dr. Dean had discovered relative to anti-American activities in that region.

MARRIED BELLE.

Dr. Dean was sixty-three years six months and one day old when killed. He was born February 12, 1856, in Wilmington, Del. Previous reports stated he was seventy-two, but that was an error. He was married at the age of twenty-five, on his birthday, February 12, 1881, to the daughter of his uncle, his first cousin, who was three years his senior and the belle of Junction, N. Y.

Mrs. Dean's beauty brought numerous proposals, but she rejected them all for her cousin, whom she had known from childhood and who had

STORING UP ENERGY FOR THE WINTER
Begin Now Taking Father John's Medicine To Build Flesh and Strength

No better time than the present can be found in which to build the flesh and strength, the vital energy needed for the coming winter. For this purpose no better tonic-food body-builder can be used than Father John's Medicine, which is of superior food value and guaranteed purity.

The rich, body-building, strength-giving elements of Father John's Medicine are combined in a form most easily taken up by those who are weak and run-down. That is why many people gain flesh and weight steadily while taking this old-fashioned family medicine. Father John's Medicine is safe to give to every member of the family because it is guaranteed free from alcohol and dangerous, narcotic drugs in any form. Begin taking it today.

been brought up in her father's home from the time he was fifteen years of age. Men of great wealth and prominence had sought the hand of Mrs. Dean. Her father, a physician, was very wealthy.

Dr. Dean was the son of the Rev. William Dean, a native of New York State, who was one of the first English-speaking missionaries sent to China. The Rev. Mr. Dean later went to Siam and his wife and son sons accompanied him. The other son, Frederick Dean, is a year and a half younger than his brother and He is a journalist and lecturer for the Y. M. C. A.

Frederick Dean lives at No. 116 West 105th street, New York city. He is dramatic editor for the New York newspaper. Dr. Dean was born in Siam and grew to manhood there. The Dean boys had tutors in Siam. Upon their return to the United States their uncle in Rochester agreed to help William in the study of medicine, and he went to a medical practice. While a student at medical school William Dean made his home with his uncle and fell in love with Mary, the daughter, whom he called Polly, and she called him "Billie" and "my baby" until his death.

HAD NO CHILDREN.

They always regretted that they had no children. Both were passionately fond of children and never missed an opportunity to entertain the offspring of neighbors. In later years young folk were among their most welcome guests at their mountain farm. Mrs. Dean enjoyed a large income from her father's estate during most of the thirty-three years of their married life.

Dr. Dean had personal investments which gave him a comfortable income for years, but for about five years before his murder the family income dwindled to such a degree that it proved a source of worry. She mentioned to many neighbors that their finances were low, after her mind became impaired, but prior to that she was just as careful as her husband always was not to discuss their domestic affairs with even their most intimate friends.

Their affection for each other was unusual. Mrs. Dean in the last hours before her death said that she loved her husband more than the last day she saw him as on their wedding day, and his joys for her was equally as profound. Dr. Dean was an unusual man in personality and intellect. He was a born gentleman and extremely refined in appearance and manner.

He was sensitive and careful of the feelings of everyone with whom he came in contact. He was never known to lose his temper and never said anything harsh about his friends or neighbors, nor would he countenance gossip.

NEVER PRACTICED MEDICINE.

He finished his medical course at the Rochester University, Rochester, N. Y., but never practiced. His wife prevailed upon him to lead an easier life, saying that her father was a slave to his profession and that she wanted her husband to try something else.

Since Dr. Dean's murder there has been talk among those who tried to cast suspicion on Mrs. Dean to the effect that she was so jealous of him that she did not want him to practice medicine for fear he would win patients. This is emphatically denied by relatives and lifelong friends of Dr. and Mrs. Dean.

This rumor further asserted that Mrs. Dean induced her husband to lead the life of a gentleman farmer in order to get him away from the temptations of a physician in the city, an insinuation that is contradicted with equal fervor by those who knew him best and longest.

After their marriage in Rochester, Dr. and Mrs. Dean lived in the South End of Boston and in Roxbury for a while. While in this city Dr. Dean suffered from a sensitive throat, and fearing that it might develop tubercular infection, they decided to seek a higher altitude away from the sea air. Dr. Dean worked as a bookkeeper in Boston for a time and was employed by Estes & Lauriat before going to New Hampshire.

SELECTED FARM.

Dr. Dean selected a plateau two miles from East Jaffrey which gave them one of the finest views in that section. He had a comfortable house with all modern conveniences erected at the edge of a clearing on the brink of a promontory overlooking Monadnock, Pack Monadnock and Wachusett mountains.

From a broad verandah a wonderful panorama is unfolded. The Dean farm became one of the show places of that section. The wealthy Summer residents brought their friends there. Dr. and Mrs. Dean kept a register. In one season more than 600 guests were entertained and shown the wonderful books and bric-a-brac and furnishings, but nobody ever remained all night and few remained for meals.

Mrs. Dean, because of her gentility and sweet disposition, was compared to Martha Washington by the country folks. If anybody was ill or in trouble she was the first to visit them. She brought them delicacies and sweets and cheered them with words and by her benevolent spirit.

Dr. Dean also had a pleasant word for every child and passerby. He was of the old school of country gentlemen. In dress he appeared more like an English squire than an American gentleman farmer. He wore straight ties, homespun coats and riding breeches with golf stockings and stout shoes. From the start he did all of the farm chores and quickly recovered from his throat affection in the healing mountain air.

LIKED OUTDOOR LIFE.

He tilled the soil and pitched hay and watered and fed the livestock, traded with other farmers and went to the village, usually twice a week, to do his shopping. He rode horseback and was a good marksman. He revelled in outdoor life. While a man of medium height and build, he was always active and muscular. From boyhood he used dumbbells of more than ordinary weight, which gave him a good chest and arm development.

He was fond of boxing and was villagers who had pugilistic tendencies engaged in friendly bouts with him occasionally in the barn, and they all testify to Dr. Dean's speed and skill. He was a very young-appearing man for his years.

He never became old in his ideas. He was a profound reader and employed correspondence with friends. He had a fine philosophy of life. He was a lover of nature and an optimist. If he had worries or troubles he kept them to himself. When his wife's mind and health began to fail, two or three years before his murder, it affected Dr. Dean nothing.

He waited upon her with the attention of a trained nurse. In addition to his chores he did the greater part of the housework and prepared the meals. Mrs. Dean was unable to do any work whatever in the last two years.

She became almost childish owing to softening of the brain, which she always dreaded and which she realized she had. She said her mother died of the same ailment. Both were fond of flowers and music. They had a quaint melodeon in the parlor.

BUILT BUNGALOW.

After they had lived on the hill for some years they decided to build a bungalow in a more sheltered part of the clearing which formed the greater part of their estate. Their property is reached from East Jaffrey by an old country road which runs to Peterboro. On the hill, after passing the last house at the fork of two roads, you drive a mile and then bear sharply to the right into the Dean property, which is extremely secluded and restful.

The bungalow is reached first at the main or original house is on the brow of the hill a quarter of a mile beyond. The stable is in a hollow on the left, about 200 feet from the bungalow and 300 feet from the main house. The bungalow is a two-story wooden building with a large hall on the ground floor.

The pillars of this hall are made of natural oak, birch and ash trees, giving with the furniture and open fireplace an extremely rustic and cozy atmosphere. The bedrooms are upstairs. The Deans lived in this bungalow for some years and rented the original house during the Summer and Fall.

Dr. Dean kept a family horse and two pedigreed Jersey cows and a registered bull, and of late years raised large white turkeys which he sold to members of the fashionable mountain colony of gentry. In the Winter he was very fond of taking long hikes and of sleighing. He had an old Russian cutter which was very picturesque.

HAD HORSEHIDE COAT.

He had a wonderful fur coat made of horsehide with different fur for collar and cuffs. It came from the skins of horses which he and his wife had raised for.

He had a billiard table and invited men friends from neighboring estates and the village to play. He was an expert with the cue. Anything he did, he did well. He was exacting. This was shown in his appearance. He was a man of strong character and will.

Dr. Dean never lost his city ways in nearly thirty years of rural life. He went to bed late and arose late, and the animals on his farm had to be attended to fifty hours also. He never reached the barn until 10 o'clock in the morning, and he invariably did his milking at midnight. He would remain up reading or writing until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, habits, by the way, which with his late trips between the barn and the bungalow, afforded him excellent opportunity to study the suspicious signal lights in that region.

Another of his former figures prominently in the murder. The persons who killed him knew about that late milking hour, and were so familiar with every foot of the premises as they obviously were of his habits. Every detail of the murder proclaimed that.

BOSTON THEATRE

At the Boston Theatre next week William Farnum will be seen in Zane Grey's romance of Western life, "The Last of the Duanes," a picture of border life with magnificent scenery and quick action. The comedy film is a Mack Sennett production entitled "Salome to Shenandoah." The vaudeville includes a farce, "Let's Get Married," with Frank Horgan, Mason and Gwynne in a blackface turn, Jim and Betty Morgan in songs of their own composition, Ernest Emmett in "Odd Bits of Melody and Swiss Yodeling," and Elly, a dainty feminine juggler.

SCOLLAY SQ. OLYMPIA

"Auction of Souls," which is to be presented at the Scollay Square Olympia next week, has the unusual distinction of a leading woman who enacted the original scenes which the picture reproduces. Miss Aurora Mardiganian is not a motion picture actress, but was induced to act for the films just what she personally passed through in Armenia with Will. In "Auction of Souls," which is the story of her harrowing years in Armenia, every detail flows the actual experiences of Miss Mardiganian. On the same program appear Lemaire-Farrell, Stewart Baird, George Jessell, Flora Hoffman, Ina Williams, Clayton and White, Della Darnell and others.

ENGLISH OPERA COMPANY

Arthur Dunham will come here as senior conductor of the Boston English Opera company, which opens an engagement of a comic repertoire at the Huntington Theatre, November 10, with "Faust."

Mr. Dunham's reputation was mainly acquired in Chicago and the Middle West, but he is well known to students of American musical history throughout the country.

For several seasons he conducted the Philharmonic Orchestra of Chicago, which he organized and founded. He was for ten years conductor of the Lyric Glee Club of Milwaukee, and for eight years of the Glee Club of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Madame Galli-Curci made her first American concert appearance at Orchestra Hall in Chicago as soloist with a concert of this glee club, under Mr. Dunham's direction. He is also a composer.

PARK THEATRE

George Loane Tucker's now famous production, "The Miracle Man," will be a return attraction next week at the Park Theatre. Since this film was shown at the Park, early in September, hundreds of requests have been received by the management asking that "The Miracle Man" be shown again. In returning to the Park for a second engagement, it follows the lead set in New York, where it already has played three repeat engagements on Broadway. The cast contains Thomas Meighan, Betty Compson, Lon Chaney, J. M. Dumont, Elinor Fair, Lawson Butt and others.

"Jane" will be screened Wednesday and Thursday, starring Thomas Meighan and Katherine McDonald, and Mma. Xanimova, in "The Brat." Friday's bill contains June Elvidge in "The Woman of Lies," and Frank Keenan in "Silver Girl." Saturday premises Veleria Cassinelli, in "The Virtuous Model," and Dorothy Walton, in "A Favor to a Friend." The usual Sunday night concert will be given, with our repeats.

CENTRAL SQ. THEATRE

As its special feature attraction Gordon's Cambridge Central Square Theatre will present "Lombardi Ltd.," with Bert Lytell, for a run of three days beginning on Monday next. There will be five acts of vaudeville, an entire change of program Thursday, Friday and Saturday will feature George Rollin in "Acts of Men," and five new all-star vaudeville acts.

COLUMBIA THEATRE

Numerous stars are offered by the management of Loew's Columbia Theatre for the coming week. Pauline Frederick, in "The Peace of Roaring River," will be shown on Monday, in addition to Fanny Ward, in "Cry of the Weak." On Tuesday, Hale Hamilton will be shown in "Four Flusher," also "Better Times," with an all-star cast. "The Thunderbolt" will be screened Wednesday and Thursday, starring Thomas Meighan and Katherine McDonald, and Mma. Xanimova. In "The Brat." Friday's bill contains June Elvidge in "The Woman of Lies," and Frank Keenan in "Silver Girl." Saturday premises Veleria Cassinelli, in "The Virtuous Model," and Dorothy Walton, in "A Favor to a Friend." The usual Sunday night concert will be given, with our repeats.

AL JOLSON TO RETURN

Following the engagement of Sothern and Marlowe at the Boston Opera House, Al Jolson will return in "Sinbad" for the two weeks beginning Monday, November 17. Mr. Jolson will, therefore, be the attraction for Boston for football week and Thanksgiving week.

The regular Sunday night concerts at the Boston Opera House will be discontinued until the arrival of Mr. Jolson in "Sinbad."

SOTHERN AND MARLOWE COMING

Player, producer, playwright and painter, are the four roles E. H. Sothern has played in the drama of life, on a stage embracing two great continents and as many important little island. With Julia Marlowe, he comes to the Boston Opera House November 3 for two weeks of Shakespearean repertoire. Mr. Sothern produces all the plays in the Sothern and Marlowe repertoire, and has done this since these two stars joined forces.

It was as a painter that Mr. Sothern began, early in life. Forbes Robertson, he gave it up to become an actor, but never wholly deserted it.

Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe will open with "Taming of the Shrew," giving later "Twelfth Night" and "Hamlet." Their company includes Frederick Lewis, Henry Stanford, Rowland Buckstone, J. Se'ver Crawley, Malcolm Bradley, Anna Kruger, Norah Lamison and others.

SHUBERT "GAIETIES OF 1919"

This piece was seen for the first time at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, New York, last July, and, after a run of several months, was transferred to the Winter Garden. The book is by Edgar Smith, the lyrics by Alfred Bryan, and the music by Jean Schwartz.

The cast will include Gilda Gray and six cyclonic girls, Marguerite Farrell, Stewart Baird, George Jessell, Flora Hoffman, Ina Williams,

Synopsis of Dean Mystery

Previous installments of the Dean murder mystery told of the efforts on the part of the victim to secure the aid of federal officials to run down German activities in the mountains. A conversation with a neighbor, Mrs. Horace Morrison of Boston, a Summer resident, was given, in which it was planned to communicate by telephone in case signal lights were seen. Failing to receive a telephone call, Mrs. Morrison went to Boston and asked that a Department of Justice agent be sent to aid Dr. Dean. The next day she read he had been murdered. Mention was made of a threatening letter received by the patriotic American, and the tentative plans made by him to secure police protection. A description of the signalling was given, together with official records showing that U-boats were frequently near enough to the New England coast to read code messages from Monadnock or Wachusett mountains. An account of the friction that existed between various officials regarding action taken following the discovery of the crime was also given.

Now go on with the story.

IRENE ALDWYN, as Fanchette in "The Confession."

To hear one's own brother condemned to death for a murder of which he is innocent; to know who the real murderer is, and be unable to speak out—this was the heart-breaking dilemma in which the priest, central figure in "The Confession," found himself placed.

Knowledge of the true circumstances came to him through his priestly office, for the guilty man had revealed his crime through the confessional. His avowal was, therefore, sacred to the priest, whose lips were sealed.

The dilemma leads to a stirring scene. A mob gathers to break jail and free the accused man, whom the priest knows to be innocent. The latter, the only man who can quell the mob, is summoned. It is his tragic duty to disperse the would-be rescuers, and relegate his own brother to the false course of the law. How his sacrifice is rewarded and justice finally prevails, is the substance of the story unfolded on the screen.

This role will be played by Henry Walthall when the film comes to Symphony Hall, November 3, for a ten days' engagement. The story is in eight reels and is a screen version of Hal Reid's successful stage play by the same title. Mr. Reid, who is the father of Wallace Reid, the screen star, has been in Boston the past week to make arrangements for the premiere of the picture. It will be produced by George H. Davis, California associate of Fred Belasco. Mr. Reid is the author of more than 100 plays.

The scene of the story is laid in the Canadian Northwest. Francis McDonald will play the role of the condemned brother, and William Clifford, that of the murderer. Margaret Landis is the leading woman and Irene Aldwyn has a sympathetic role. Special music has been arranged and a large symphony orchestra will be assisted by the Harmony Quartet. Two performances will be given daily.

MALDEN AUDITORIUM

"Over Night," one of the funniest farces ever written, will be presented by the Temple Stock Company at the Malden Auditorium for the coming week. The dialogue is brisk and the characters are natural. Miss Adelyn Bushnell will play the leading feminine part. The usual daily matinees will begin at 2:15.

LANCASTER THEATRE

For the first three days of the week will be seen Dorothy Dalton in "The Market of Souls" and Vivian Martin in "The Third Kiss." There will be a chance of pictures on Thursday, when Nazimova will be seen in "The Brat," one of her most successful screen triumphs. Marguerite Clark in "Widow by Proxy," is the companion picture. There will be a concert on Sunday evening.

THE STAGE
PLAYS CHANGE AT THREE THEATRES

Three new openings at local theatres on Monday present as marked a contrast as it would be possible to conceive. A drama of labor and capital; a comedy built about the unscrupulous love-making of a decadent nobleman; and a burlesque review of the foibles of the day—these are the offerings of the week. The first is "The Challenge," coming to the Park Square Theatre, with Holbrook Blinn and Allan Dinehart; the second, "The Marquis de Priola," with Leo Ditrichstein, at the Tremont Theatre; and the last-named, "The Scandals of 1919," with George White and Ann Pennington, at the Colonial.

"The Challenge," by Eugene Walter.

In "The Challenge" after-war problems of social and working conditions come to a head, involving the lives of three people, central figures of the plot. These are portrayed by Holbrook Blinn, Louise Dyer and Allan Dinehart, the two latter playing opposite as lovers separated by the radical social tendencies of the man and the steadfast adherence of the woman to her own ideals.

These two players are remembered here for their work together in "The Crowded Hour." They have been a successful team in vaudeville for some time, although both have appeared also in serious productions. During the troubles incident to the actors' strike, Miss Dyer assumed the role of Mary Winthrop in "The Challenge" at a few hours' notice, not even having read the lines when she was called upon in the afternoon to play that evening.

"I got through that first performance on my nerves," she said afterward. "I had only one rehearsal, and that but a partial one. But, of course, having Allan Dinehart playing opposite me was a great help as I answered to him."

The new play is said to be a vivid and gripping story, containing both human material and food for thought.

Ditrichstein as a Lover.

Henri Lavedan, author of "The Marquis de Priola," in which Leo Ditrichstein will portray a different sort of lover from any role in which he has yet been seen, was the author of "The Duel," famous on two continents, played by Otis Skinner; "Stephen," played by the same actor; and "Catherine," in which Annie Russell starred.

The Marquis is a worn-out rogue whose ruling passion for woman-hunting has endured through the palling of other amusements, until it has become the pursuit of his decadent years. A bad man, unscrupulous, jaded, yet always eager for the pursuit, the character is said to have startled even Paris when first portrayed there. If forecasts are true, there is no mawkish sentimentality in this play, no redemption or whitewashing; the Marquis is a bad old man and remains consistently bad to the bitter end. There are said to be good lines in plenty, in Lavedan's best comedy vein. The role affords Mr. Ditrichstein opportunities for brilliant acting with full play for his native subtlety and finesse.

The production of his play marks the debut of the actor as a manager in his own right. The cast with him includes Brandon Tynan, Orlando Daly, Earle Mitchell, Ann Macdonald, Josephine Hamner and Margaret Sutherland.

The Dancing Drama.

George White of "The Scandals of 1919" has made a discovery. "In dancing," says he, "the right foot is the serious one, and the left foot the comedy one."

Just as black and white make gray, so the two feet together can express the emotions between comedy and tragedy. Put it out on your own floor, provided the fellow who lives below you doesn't object.

"Seriously though, it is quite possible to tell a story as eloquently with your feet as with your voice or your face. There is a pantomime of the feet that is only just being discovered. If you think that dancing is just dancing, watch Ann Pennington, and Lester Allen, and La Sylphe—all in the 'Scandals.'

"There you have Maude Adams, Sam Bernard and Ethel Barrymore—metaphorically speaking. I am now working out an interpretation of one of the biggest comedy successes of the past season that I hope to present entirely in dance steps, and I am so sure that the audience will understand it that I am not going to give the title on the program when I introduce it into the 'Scandals of 1919.'"

SHUBERT THEATRE

Sixteen years ago Rosemary Sill was born. She was the daughter of William Raymond Sill, formerly a dramatic critic of New York, and at that time personal representative of Weber and Fields. When his only child was born, he telephoned the glad news to Lew Fields, who asked the sex.

"It's a girl!" responded the proud father.

"All right, I'll send her a contract." And he did. The contract arrived an hour later, was framed, and hung in the nursery. From that time on it has never left the girl's possession. And when she was but sixteen, a few months ago, she presented herself to Mr. Fields at the Casino Theatre in New York and, handing him the framed contract, said she wanted to go to work. That settled it. She is now appearing with Lew Fields in "A Lonely Romeo" at the Shubert Theatre.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE

The super-hen is a fraud. Wild dreams of a new breed, developed according to none of its eggs would feed reality, have been afloat, based statement by Anton E. Briggs of Boston, president of the National Poultry, Butter & Egg Association.

"Just the thing!" thought Florence Moore, who has a quarrel every evening with Leon Gordon over the new egg served for tea in "Breakfast in Bed" at the Plymouth Theatre. So Miss Moore wrote to Mr. Briggs to ask how she could get a super hen, to use for "prop" purposes. And now Mr. Briggs, in a letter to the actress, disclaims all knowledge of the breed. He says he never said it. The whole company is disappointed.

The run of the play is nearing a close, as it will soon go to New York.

BOSTON OPERA HOUSE

In view of the success of "Monte Cristo, Jr.," at the Boston Opera House, the stage history of the play on which the Winter Garden spectacle was founded is of interest. Next week in the last of this production here.

In 1842, the elder Dumas was in Florence when Prince Bonaparte proposed a tour with his son, Prince Napoleon. Among other places, they were to visit the Island of Elba, where the first Napoleon was incarcerated. Dumas discovered near by an island which, discerned at a distance, was a rock of a sugar-loaf shape. On inquiry, he was told it was the Island of Monte Cristo. Dumas was taken with the name and expressed a desire that they visit the island. "I intend," said he "in memory of this trip with you, to give the name of Monte Cristo to some novel I shall write later on."

The novel having been completed, the elder Dumas in collaboration with M. Maquet, brought out his stage version of "Monte Cristo" in 1848. Remodeled, the play was brought out in America by John Stetson in 1883 at the Booth Theatre, New York. "Monte Cristo, Jr.," a burlesque by Richard Henry, with music by Meyer Lutz and Ivan Caryl, was done at the Gaiety Theatre, London, in 1886, and later in America.

WILBUR THEATRE

To what extent do stars portray themselves when they write their own plays and place themselves in hero roles? Take the case of William Hodge, who, on Monday, begins his third week at the Wilbur Theatre in his latest play, "The Guest of Honor." The hero is a young writer, struggling patiently and good-humoredly against adversity and helping a homeless little boy.

As a matter of fact, writing is hardly less important a part of Mr. Hodge's life than acting. He has written three of the last four plays in which he has appeared, and he even wrote part of the fourth. Then, again, he is devoted to children. He is the kindest and most affectionate father to his own two little ones—a regular story-book father, full of fun when he is with them and studiously consulting their interests. The fact that the entire play centres about the figure of the child, whose fate becomes closely involved with those of the principal man and woman of the story, shows the author's personal tendencies.

HOLLIS STREET THEATRE

To see Georges Durand treating Nelly Daventry with many impudence in the first act of "Mlle Nelly of N'Orleans" at the Hollis Street Theatre, no one would suspect that Hamilton Revelle, party of the first part, and Mrs. Fiske, party of the second part, were not only best friends in the world, but that "we lady had served as chief inspiration to the gentleman in his evocation of the stage. Mr. Revelle is an actor by night (and matinees), and a photographer by day. But not a mere photographer. He has become an artist in the craft, and some of Mrs. Fiske's best portraits were made by him. He is regarded as one of the leading amateur photographers in the country, having won many prizes in competition. Mr. Revelle's chief endeavor this year is his photograph in colors of Mrs. Fiske in the role of "Mlle Nelly of N'Orleans," which will appear as frontispiece in the December number of a well-known magazine.

ARLINGTON THEATRE

"Othello," at the Arlington Theatre on Monday evening, will close the season of Shakespearean repetoire by the Craig Players. On Tuesday evening, and for the rest of the week, "Common Clay" will be the attraction. This drama, by Cleves Kinkead, will be remembered as the fifth and most successful of all the Craig prize plays. It ran for seventeen weeks at the Arlington Theatre, then known as the Castle Square, and later, to capacity audiences elsewhere.

Several of the leading parts will be noted by the original players. Mary Hall will again appear as Ellen Neal, John Craig as Judge Filson, Betty Barnicoat as Mrs. Richard Fullerton, and Mabel Colcord as Mrs. Neal, with other important roles in the hands of Harry Gribble, Charles Bickford, Edward Bell, Bert Pennington and Marjorie Dalton.

The American field service medal has been sent to Mr. and Mrs. John Craig (Mary Young) in recognition of their many services with the "Service Automobile Americain aux Armees Francaise."

MAJESTIC THEATRE

Next week is the last here of "Fair Helen," modernized version of Offenbach's opera bouffe, with the original title and book, but all the effect of a novelty, for it is a new thing to the present generation of playgoers to see the burlesque of mythical characters as Menelaus and Halwyn, the typical silhouettes, conceived them. The twentieth century version would be equally a revelation to those gentlemen.

Menelaus, the chivalrous and kingly, as a hen-pecked husband, travelling with a carpet-bag and pink parasol; Agamemnon, King of men, in a ruffled ballet skirt, Greek helmet and the make-up of an Irish burlesque comedian; Achilles with hair the color of strawberry frappe—these are new features, even in opera bouffe. Only Helen the Fair and Paris, the shepherd lover, portrayed by Marcia Van Dresser and James Harrod, the tenor, retain their beauty and heroic appearance, although their action is also a part of the burlesque.

KEITH'S THEATRE

At Keith's next week, Mabel McCane, musical comedy star, will be seen in "A Smart Revue," with a company that includes Tom Bryan, Lillian Broderick and William B. Taylor.

It is one of the most costly acts yet seen in vaudeville.

James Thornton will tell in his inimitable way, confidentially, some things people like to hear when properly told. Roger Imhof, Hazel Le Conn and Marcelle Doreene will be seen in a travesty entitled "The Poet House," in which the fun is the only thing contagious, and Adelaide Hermann, widow of the famous prestidigitateur, offers a new series of illusions. Henry Regal and Sim Moore, a Boston boy, present an acrobatic comedy entitled "Drop Us a Line." Myrtle Fish and George Lloyd in "A Sixth Century Honeymoon," do some clever singing and dancing; Walter Clinton and Julia Hosmer flirt and dance; Charles Morey, Charles Senna and Lew Lee give "Music, Song and Laughter"; Pat and Julie Lewis waltz and do other sensational acts on the wire.

WALDRON'S CASINO

A peacock parade in the form of a fashion show, with young and beautiful girls wearing over 100 different gowns, dresses and wraps of the latest modes, will be one of the features of Arthur Pearson's "Step Lively Girls" at Waldron's Casino next week. Mr. Pearson has secured a two-act satire called "All Wet" a reminder of the days when Weber and Fields were at their best. The principal comedians are "Shorty" McAllister and Harry T. Shannon. Others in the cast are Catherine Crawford, little Ann Propp, Margie Wilson, Jack Mundy and Lillian Fowler. The usual entertainment will be given on Sunday night.

GAYETY THEATRE

"Hello America," at the Gayety Theatre next week, is produced by Joe Hurtig and is entirely new—wardrobe, scenery and musical numbers. The two Sams, Lewis and Dody, are the principal comedians with the show. Actress Miss Margaret White there will be Elisabeth Barringer, Billie Hill, Sam Bennett, Shaw and Lee, and a large and shapely chorus of thirty pretty girls.

HOWARD ATHENAEUM

Patrons of burlesque will welcome Jack Reid and his Record Breakers Burlesque Company at the Howard Athenaeum on Monday for a week's visit. Mr. Reid will play the role of "The Information Kid." He has surrounded himself with a capable cast of pretty girls, and the management will, as usual, put forth a vaudeville program in addition to the burlesque. The Sunday concert begins at 7 p. m.

GORDON'S OLYMPIA

Twelve thousand-dollar bills, "mislaid" by Anita Stewart, caused a holdup of the entire staff in rehearsal of "Her Kingdom of Dreams," in which Miss Stewart is starring. The whole acting, managerial and directing force of the studio, under Marshall Nelson, turned out to search. At last the bills were found—in Anita's stocking. The star will be seen as Judith Rudledge in this film at Gordon's Olympia next week.

Miss Stewart plays the role of a country girl who goes to work in a big city. As a stenographer she becomes involved in the family affairs of her employer, the wealthy Mr. Warren.

Other pictures include the latest Lyman Moran comedy, the Chesterfield Travel picture and the Olympia News Weekly. The bill of vaudeville is headed by Tedelle and Bennett in a dancing act.

MODERN AND BEACON THEATRES

Another triple bill will be shown at the Modern and Beacon Theatres next week, the feature of which will be Dorothy Dalton in "L'Apache." Charles Ray in "Crooked Straight" and the Mack Sennett comedy, "Salome vs. Shenandoah," complete the program.

In "L'Apache" Miss Dalton appears in a double role, first as a daring French Apache dancer and later as an extravagantly clothed American heiress, living a life of shame.

The actress has just signed a contract to appear in the fifth role of "Aphrodite" on the stage, which will soon have its New York premiere.

Charles Ray, in "Crooked Straight," is again the country boy, but with more dramatic opportunities than usual.

WALDORF THEATRE

"Oh You Baby" is the title of the musical melange which will be presented at the Waldorf Theatre next week. It is a revue featuring Tommy Lavens, Frank Murray and Madelaine Buckley, all well known here. The bill for the first three days of the week will be the "Maid of Mexico," presented in two scenes. Assisting in the funmaking will be George Brown, Al Casey Fox, Muriel Moore and a dozen selected beauties.

TREMONT TEMPLE

There is one scene in Mary Pickford's production of "The Hoodlum," the second million-dollar photoplay from her own studio, which opens at Tremont Temple Monday, in which Mary "Our Mary" did not have to do any acting. This is the scene showing Jackie at the wheel of a sporty automobile which she drives at breakneck speed. Miss Pickford has long been an enthusiastic autoist and a most expert driver, and at her California home maintains a large garage in which several different types of cars are kept.

"The Hoodlum" will be seen twice daily. It is a version of Julia M. Lippman's story of "Burkses' Amy."

The story briefly is that of the pampered grandchild of a millionaire who gives up her society existence to follow a dreamer-author father to the slums, where a lack of appreciation of his work has brought him. In her life in New York's East Side, to which Amy adapts herself with a readiness which is surprising, she makes many new friends and takes a part in shaping their destinies.

UPHAM'S CORNER STRAND

At the Upham's Corner Strand Theatre next week's bill is headed by an all-star production, "The Unpardonable Sin," which has created a furore from coast to coast. Carter De Haven in "Close to Nature," a new comedy and the Strand News Weekly complete the bill.

Mabel Normand heads the program for Thursday, Friday and Saturday in "The Jinx," followed by King Baggott in "The Man Who Stayed at Home."

FENWAY THEATRE

At the Fenway next week "The Life Line," adapted from the famous melodrama, "The Romany Rye," picturised by Maurice Tourneur, will be presented. The sinking ocean liner and the realistic theatre fire are only a few of the thrills that this picture contains. The supporting feature is Nazimova, in her latest picture, "The Brat." A Mutt and Jeff cartoon, news weekly and other short subjects are also included in the program. Vincent Spaulding has been re-engaged as soloist.

Thursday a new program will include Wallace Reid in "The Lottery Man," and Pathe's mystery play, "The Thirteenth Chair."

Sunday evening Dorothy Gish will be seen in "The Hope Chest," and the Lee children in "The Troublemakers."

ORPHEUM THEATRE

Amusement seekers will find an excellent program of vaudeville and photoplays for the coming week at Loew's Orpheum Theatre. Gillen and Mulcahey are scheduled to appear in "Songland," and Pearl Abbott and company will offer a one-act play entitled "Silver Threads." Johnson Bros. and Johnson will give a few moments of pulmotory, and a melange of music and harmony will be produced by Harrison and Holloway. Other acts of popular appeal will be offered in addition to the photoplay feature, starring Florence Reed in "Her Game." The vaudeville numbers will be completely changed the last three days of the week and the feature film will be the first Boston presentation of Eugene O'Brien in "Sealed Hearts." On Sunday evening there will be the usual concert.

Following a recent announcement of new additions to the Loew circuit of theatres, it has become known that a large and beautiful new house will be opened by this management on Massachusetts avenue, near Norway street.

GLOBE THEATRE

Two photoplays on the program for the first half of the coming week at Loew's Globe Theatre are Edith Sterling, in "The Arisona Catclaw," a story of the West, and Peggy Hyland, in "The Girl of Bohemia." The program will be changed the latter part of the week, when Florence Reed in "Her Game" and Eugene O'Brien in "Sealed Hearts" will be the topliners. The Sunday night concert will be given, as usual.

LUCK MAY WIN FOR TIGER

Princeton Has Often Accomplished Unexpected Victory on Home Gridiron

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Is Princeton's fairy godmother perching on the Tiger goal posts at the game with Colgate in the Palmer Stadium this afternoon?

Football teams, in past years, have come to Tigertown vowing all sorts of harm to the Jungle Princes, but unnoticed in the misty Fall atmosphere, this fairy godmother has taken her commanding position on one of the white uprights of the playing field and, calling mind and matter to her aid, she has brought victories to her Jungle Princes when defeat seemed their only possible portion.

Princeton football history is replete with instances in which teams, much superior in almost every respect to their Princeton opponents and vigorously determined to prove it, have met the unconquerable efforts of this selfsame fairy godmother and, after that meeting, have voiced in pitiful hopelessness that most expressive wail, "What's the Use?"

Fumbled footballs that have been snatched up by Tiger players and carried without hindrance on fabulously long trips to the opposing goal line; attempted field goals that have dribbled along the ground, bounced against an opposing player and then sailed fair and true between opposition goal posts; other attempted field goals veering widely from the intended mark, that have been caught by a vagrant breeze and swept back into the proper channel, constitute but a very few of the demonstrations of the unusual power of Princeton's fairy godmother. Consequently it is small wonder that the question of her presence in the Palmer Stadium today has risen in the minds of football fandom.

SQUAD NOT IMPRESSIVE.

There is a strange, passing strange, characteristic about Princeton football. Give the Tigers the most mediocre collection of football talent and Princeton will win the majority of its games, but present them with an entire team of stars and add every break in the luck of the game and they go down to defeat.

This afternoon the Tigers, with the least impressive squad of men in Princeton's history, are opposing one of the greatest, if not the very greatest team in the country. On paper the Tigers lack what popularly is called "a Chinaman's chance," yet, if Princeton history is to repeat itself, as it so often has done, the outcome of the game with Colgate will be anything but the expected.

Accounts of this game and the Dartmouth-Cornell contest at the Polo Grounds, New York, will be closely scrutinized by the football following public, owing to the bearing they will have on the Dartmouth-Colgate contest at Hanover, N. H., one week from today. If both Dartmouth and Colgate live up to expectations, the Hanover attraction of next week may prove the game that decides the Eastern championship.

GREEN SOMEWHAT WEAKER.

As Dartmouth plays today, her team is somewhat weakened at the wing positions. Injuries have taken the first string pair of ends from the contest, and with "Shifty" Shiverick in the Cornell backfield the end substitutes will be called upon to offer very superior brand of wing play. Only in those positions and in the possession of Shiverick does the Cornell team show to an advantage, and Dartmouth, with a vastly superior line and a smashing backfield, should come clean if not with a decidedly brilliant polish.

Western interest today was quite naturally centered in the Ohio State-Michigan meeting at Ann Arbor. These two teams, with perhaps Chicago added, appear to be the class of the conference circuit, and perhaps in the Ann Arbor event the champion of the Mid-Western college collection will blossom forth. Harley, the all-American halfback of 1916, is again with the Ohio State array, and on him does the Columbus School count for a victory.

Babe Ruth en Route to Coast to Be Filmed

Big Babe Ruth, accompanied by Mrs. Ruth and Johnnie Igoe, one of the ticket sellers at Fenway Park, is en route to Los Angeles. He is due to reach that city at 5:30 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon.

Although President Frazee was in town, he made no effort to get in touch with his star slugger before the latter's departure, and Babe hinted that for his part he didn't try to hunt his boss up. All that Ruth thought about was his venture in California and the fairly busy time he will have this Winter.

Babe doesn't intend to do any loafing. He will stop for the first few days at a hotel in Los Angeles, but after securing a bungalow, where he will pass the Winter, he intends to locate in Hollywood, the home of all the movie stars. There he will find Mr. and Mrs. Lester Thomas awaiting him.

Carl Mays' Case to Be Fought to a Finish

By HUGH S. FULLERTON.

Baseball—both the business and the sport—need renovating. The Winter scandal season has opened—the magnates being in mid-Winter form before the stench of the World's Series began to subside.

The Mays case is up again, stronger than ever. The fact that Frank Navin, head of the Detroit club, has stopped the National Commission from paying over to the New York club $13,000 of the World's Series receipts, due that team for finishing third in the American League, shows what is coming. It means that Ban Johnson and his friends in the American League are going to fight, and that the fight over the Mays case means the elimination of one or the other faction.

I know Frank Navin. He is a gentleman and a sportsman, and about the last fellow in the world to raise an argument involving money on a financial point. His club finished fourth, just behind the Yankees. Had he been kept fighting hard and willing, it would have beaten New York out. Navin has no personal interest in the $13,000. It was to have been distributed among the players. The Detroit players had no thought of getting the money. So far as I can learn, none of them thought of the point raised by Navin, which was that the games in which Mays played with the Yankees should be thrown out.

Navin had an object in bringing the action. Navin has stood with Ban Johnson in the Mays case. In the past Navin has been rather the lieutenant of the league, but usually has sided with Johnson. His action indicates that Johnson is determined to force the issue in the Mays squabble, and that he believes he holds a clear majority of the American League votes.

Possibly Navin merely desires that Mays be debarred from getting about $250 for jumping the club. Mays did quit, his club cold and declared he was done with baseball. Then he was sold to New York and won enough games for that team to enable it to finish third and cause the Tigers out. If a player can get away with that, any star on a tail-end club can leave his team when it drops out of the fight and join one of the real contestants.

WAITED FOR BOSTON.

Johnson waited for the Boston club to suspend Mays—but it did not. He was worth too much money. Johnson, as president, then suspended him. The New York club defied Johnson and the case is in the courts. If Johnson sustains Detroit's contention, and throws out all games Mays pitched for New York, the court may hold him in contempt.

Yet the move of Navin is very clearly backed by the Johnson faction in the American League. The anti-Johnson faction at present consists of Frazee, Colonel Huston and Tomlinson. Griffith, formerly with the rebels against Johnson, appears to have switched back to the Johnson faction. Dunn, of Cleveland, seems to be with Johnson and Johnson owns Cleveland stock. St. Louis is counted surely with Johnson. Navin is a Johnson adherent in this case. It appears that Mack, the same as he defied the National Commission, holds quite a balance of power. Evidently the Johnson faction counts upon the Philadelphia vote. But Mack, after the treatment accorded him in the Scott Perry case, and the treatment accorded his ball club during the last season, appears to have little cause for love toward the league president. Yet Johnson is forcing the issue. The issue can mean only another bitter war in baseball.

I happen to know that, during the World's Series, conferences were held and plans discussed for an entire readjustment of so-called "Organized Baseball."

A SCRAP OF PAPER.

The National Agreement has, in fact, become a dead letter. Five club owners have openly defied the commissions to enforce the agreement, and the minor leagues have repudiated great sections of it and defied the commission entirely. There is a plan afoot for a major league—not exactly a new Federal, but a smashing big league, which may include such clubs from both the old circuits and also one in Buffalo. What will come from this talk is uncertain, but it is sure that the major leagues now need a thorough house cleaning.

"Organized baseball" was founded upon good faith, and the owners and players alike have forgotten that faith.

Oh, for another Hulbert.

Christy Mathewson and I had a great argument during the game. It lasted through the entire eight games and the point of disagreement was the double steal and how to stop it. My argument was that no runner, no matter how fast, can score from third on the throw to second if the catcher makes the throw without hesitation and if he cut down and returned perfectly to the plate. It is based upon the judgment of old-time catchers, especially King Kelly, both in that and that the ball cannot be beaten unless the catcher hesitates.

HOW PLAY WAS MADE.

The old-timers made the play in this way. The catcher paid no attention whatever to the runner at third. He caught the ball and threw to second as fast and as hard as he could. The shortstop was right at third between the bag and the pitcher, the second baseman covered second—or vice versa—depending upon the batter. If the runner at third started home the shortstop got the ball and threw back to the plate. If the runner held third the shortstop let the ball go through and the second baseman tagged the runner coming down from first.

Matty argued that the runner at third could take a chance and come twenty-five feet, or more, before the throw before the catcher threw, and then score. I offered to give the runner a thirty-foot running start and then wager that he could not cover the remaining sixty feet while the ball went down to the shortstop and came back. Matty argued that the catcher could look at third base to see what the runner is doing, and that no catcher can keep from throwing the second if he has made up his mind to, even though he looks and sees the runner coming. I contended that the flaw in his argument was that the catcher should never look—but follow the old timer's rule of ignoring the runner.

The Cincinnati catchers made absolutely no effort to stop the double steal, but allowed the runners to go to second without throwing at all, merely looking at third. But later Schalk gave me an edge on the argument and made the prettiest defensive play of the series. The Reds had runners at first and third and the double steal was tried. Schalk shot the ball straight toward the second bag—without looking toward third. Collins came forward to within twenty feet of the pitcher and held up his hands. The runner dived back toward third, knowing he could not score, and Collins drew down his hands, let the ball go on to Risberg and the runner coming down from first was caught standing up.

MATTY'S CLAIM.

Did I win the argument? No. Matty claimed the runner should have come from third at top speed.

J. Murray Gibbon, the eminent Scotch-Canadian novelist and publicist, who used to be editor of Black and White in London, and who has hunted and fished the four ends of the world, had a new experience during the World's Series. He saw his first baseball game. He understood a lot of it too. When he was leaving the park he remarked:

"I sat with two chaps who seemed very conversant with the sport—they appeared to understand every move and amazed me with their familiarity with the plays."

"Who were they?"

"I think their names were Matty and Alexander."

Hunt Is Low Handicap at Winchester

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

The Winchester Country Club keeps right up to the minute always, and with the 1919 season not quite finished, has already prepared its list of 1920 club handicaps and sent the list to Dan Horan, State handicapper, who will have plenty of time to peruse the figures before giving the Winchester players their State ratings.

F. Lambert Hunt Jr. is the low handicap man. He is at five, with Ralph Hornblower and R. T. Hicks at six. Hornblower won the club championship this year and Hicks has been one of Winchester's best for a long time. His greatest golf feat was reaching the final round in the State championship in 1916.

Hunt was given the place of honor because he has been the most consistent winner of gross prizes in the medal play week-end club tournaments. He has been under 80 more frequently than any other Winchester player over the home greens, and deserves his place. Five plus goes for all right. They are H. T. Bond, Lawrence M. Lombard, W. J. Page, H. K. Stephenson and T. F. Tully. Perley Chase is at nine.

Mrs. D. M. Belcher created a woman's record for the course this season when she had this card:

out ..... 6 6 6 6 5 4 5 5 3—45
in ..... 5 5 5 7 5 4 5 5 4—45—90

The course record is held by Francis Ouimet at 72, now that it is likely to be some time before it is beaten. The figure is 66.

Another record at Winchester which had stood the test of considerable time is the ringer score of S. T. Hicks made in 1916. That year the eighteen holes were opened. Players have been shooting at it ever since but it appears to be unapproachable. Here it is:

out ..... 4 4 4 3 3 2 3 4 4—33
in ..... 3 2 4 3 3 2 4 3 5—29—62

This card shows four twos. It might be possible to better it if one could sink a couple of tee shots, which reminds me of a comment made by Bobby Jones at Oakmont on the day of the preliminary qualifying round of the national amateur championship. He heard that his pal, Perry Adair, was going badly and might not qualify. He went out on the course and picked Perry up at the fifteenth hole. When Bobby came back to the clubhouse he was asked about Adair.

"When I left him," he said, "he had three ones for a ninety."

Adair failed to qualify, his downfall being the first big upset of the 1919 amateur championship.

Carpenters are busy on the new caddy house at Winchester. When complete the quarters will be envied by all caddies who are not lucky enough to be under Winchester guardianship. The house looks more like a Summer cottage than a caddy shelter.

BOSTON-N. Y. BOAT TRIPS DISCONTINUED

The Metropolitan line from Boston to New York announces that the service on this arm of the Eastern Steamship branch will be discontinued this week. The last sailing out of Boston for New York will be tomorrow, from New York for Boston today. The business on this arm of the service has been heavy all season, more than double that of last year. Particular satisfaction has been expressed at the service, which has been excellent as to food, staterooms and the environment in general.

The regular schedule of freight service will be maintained during the Winter.

AMBITIOUS JOE TIPLITZ SEEKS LIGHTWEIGHT CROWN

By JACK CONWAY.

Joe Tiplitz, who meets Joey Fox in the feature bout of the all-star show at the Atlas Club of Lawrence today, is an ambitious youth. Just now he is out to prove he is the best lightweight in this land of the brave.

Tiplitz is only nineteen years of age and has proved a ring sensation. He has clashed with the best boys of his weight in six-round tussles in Philadelphia rings and has proved himself a blue-ribbon performer.

In his only Boston start, Tiplitz opposed Johnny Dundee. He lost a hairline decision after a torrid contest. Tiplitz hopes to dispose of Fox today. He'll then rest for a couple of days so that he will be at his best for his contest with Charley Parker at Mechanics building next Tuesday night under the direction of the Armory A. A.

Pal Reid, who is slated to oppose Red Vinton of Waterbury in another ten round number, is one of the most promising middleweights in the East. He is a stiff puncher and has enough confidence and courage for a flock of boxers.

Barney Adair of New York and Chick Simler, Scranton lightweight, were scheduled to furnish the thrills in another frolic. Adair has been a steady winner in New England rings, while Simler is well known for his two battles with Dundee.

Battling Reddy and Al Shubert complete an attractive card.

Entries for the amateur boxing tournament at the Watertown Arsenal A. A. close next Tuesday with Billy Volk, Watertown Arsenal. There will be bouts at 105, 115 and 135 pounds. The contests will be staged in Cyprus Hall, Cambridge.

In addition to the three open classes there will be two special bouts, one between Tom Verner of Watertown and Larry O'Mella of South Boston, and the other between Charley Flanagan of South Boston and Peter Norton who hails from Roxbury.

Verner and O'Mella recently had a torrid battle at Cambridge. The latter won a close decision.

Eddie Mack has posted $100 with the American that Abe Friedman will be at 118 pounds at 3 o'clock for his twelve-round bout with Gardner Brooks at Lynn next Thursday night. Brooks has agreed to put up a similar amount.

Johnny Downes will not experience any trouble getting down to 133, Joe McDonald informs us that he is prepared to match either Dan McCormack or Jimmy O'Brien for a contest with Downes at 133 pounds.

Magiorie Labbelle left today for Two Rivers, Wis., where he is booked to meet Billy Kramer in a battle that Charlie says the "Fighting Clown" is prepared to score another victory.

PAUL DOYLE PROVES TOO FAST FOR BILLY CARNEY

Paul Doyle of New York proved too clever and fast for Billy Carney of New Bedford in their six-round bout at the Commercial A. C., and won the decision.

Willie Corbett, ex-National amateur champion, knocked out "Tootsie" O'Toole of South Boston in the sixth round. Frankie Haley of the South End stopped Young Higgins of South Boston in three rounds. Young Monge of East Boston defeated Fred Southeir of Everett in six rounds.

BRIGHTON HIGH MEETS FIRST DEFEAT OF YEAR

Brighton High was defeated for the first time this season, Hyde Park scoring a victory at Hyde Park, 20 to 6. The game was in the Boston District League series, and puts Hyde Park in a position to win the championship. A feature was a 35-yard run by Captain "Gene" Hussey for a touchdown. His kicking and the work of Howe was good, while Duffy and Lydon led for Brighton High.

MATINEE RACING HELD ON SPEEDWAY

The Metropolitan Driving Club held the last matinee of the Charles River Speedway today. There were nine races on the card, one of which was a handicap event for the fast pacers and trotters.

Gardini Winner Over Mort Henderson in Straight Falls

Renato Gardini, the Italian champion, defeated Mort Henderson, the original masked marvel, in straight falls at the Mechanics Building wrestling tournament. Stanislaus Stasiak, billed as the Polish giant, won in straight falls from Frits Larson.

A decision which aroused the ire of the fans gave Nick Karavas of this city a victory over Steve Graaf of Detroit in straight falls. Neither decision seemed clean cut, as Graaf's shoulders did not seem to be pinned to the mat.

Mike Nastor of Chicago was given a decision by default over Ernest Vandalf of this city when Vandalf lost his temper, made an attempt to change the bout into a boxing exhibition and left the ring, refusing to continue.

Harvard opposed Virginia in the Stadium this afternoon. It was the fifth game on the Crimson's schedule and the first one in which slippery Eddie Casey and clever Ralph Horween were numbered among the missing. Harvard's lineup, however, had plenty of strength.

Stan Burnham played his first game of the season at right halfback. Humphrey played the other half and Art Hamilton fullback. Hubbard replaced Kane at right tackle, but the rush line otherwise played as it did against Brown.

Captain Ray was at fullback for the Virginians, who arrived in Boston early today.

More open play featured the Harvard practice. Forward passes were tried here and there and the offense began to run smoothly. Coach Fisher, with his mind on the Princeton and Yale games, planned to save his men from punishment as much as possible, and intended to withdraw the first stringers as soon as it was safe to do so.

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 25.—Princeton and Colgate lined up on a gridiron made soggy by recent wet weather in the Palmer Stadium. Colgate was the favorite, the Princeton men generally refusing to wager on the outcome of the contest unless given odds.

Just before the game started Coach Roper of Princeton refused to make any predictions, but said he was pleased by the progress made by his charges during the past week.

Laurie Bankhart, Colgate's football mentor, smilingly admitted he expected victory, but would not estimate the size of the score.

New York, Oct. 25.—Dartmouth was made favorite over Cornell when the Big Green and Red and White football teams lined up on the Polo Grounds today, despite the brilliant attack the Ithacans had built around Quarterback Pete Shiverick.

The Dartmouth team went into the game with instructions to keep the ball on Cornell's side of the field as Shiverick was expected to attempt a goal from the field when his team had placed the ball inside the Green's forty-five-yard line.

Should the Cornell defence develop unexpected strength Robertson was relied on to score via the air route for Dartmouth, but as the Big Green players were confident of pushing their opponents across the goal line for at least one touchdown, the attempt at a goal from the field was to be a last resort.

MAIL VOTE FOR TRACK CAPTAIN AT HARVARD

The election of a Harvard track captain will be made by mail. Only seniors who are possessors of the "H" are eligible. Burnham Lewis, the two-mile runner, and Bob Harwood, the pole vaulter, are the most prominent of the eligibles. Eighteen men are to vote. The new captain succeeds W. Moore, who resigned.

Forest B. Beaten for First Time This Season

Windsor, Ct., Oct. 25.—Forest H. met his Waterloo in the final day's racing at Sage Park. After winning eleven straight, he was beaten by both Allie Wood the Great and Eudora Spier in the 2:11 trot. It was his first defeat of the season. The 2:24 trot looked like a sure win for the Boston mare Violet T., which won the first two heats, but was finally beaten by Tarrytown. Directum J., as was expected, grabbed the $1,000 free-for-all race. He was driven by Tommy Murphy and made a show of his small but select field. He paced the first and third miles in 2:07¾, but failed to equal the track record of Roan Half's 2:07.

The banner crowd of the week's sport was on hand, and the curtain was rung down on Sage Park's most successful racing season.

GERMAN OPERA

GERMAN opera is written exclusively for the fristnighters, as there never is a second night.

ALL German opera is laid in two scenes and an otherlogue. The first scene is laid in the Fatherland on the Rhine, where the Yank adds A. E. F. to the German alphabet. The second scene is laid in the nearest hospital right alongside the actors. Evvy the most hardboiled opponent of weinie opera admits that it is meeting with the success that it deserves.

THE audience at the kraut operas have been so large that they overflowed the Lexington Opera House, the Polyclinic Hospital and all the station houses in the Wagner zone.

THE critics claim that Wagner's garlic spangled music sounds like a riot. The illusion is perfect, especially if you ain't good at ducking cobble gebbles. A German opera has consists of a silk lined coal scuttle. When the Meisteranger comes out to lead the Bangerbund, the specially prepared audience pops up and smothers him with bouquets of granite blossoms from the quarry orchards of Vermont. Then a big chorus of cops wave their riot batons to music that is furnished by the augmented orchestra of ambulance gongs. The audience finds it can applaud better when it wears brass knuckles. In order to sing Wagner right, a real artist should be unconscious of disturbing influence. And after the first brickbat biscuit lands on his skullpiece, every Wagner singer is a real artist.

THE Wagner operas are built around the Lorelei, a sewing circle of limburger vamps who lured sailors to destruction on the rocks. Which is Wagner's big mistake. Sailors and rocks would bust up anything. When ever the bulls count up the gate receipts of a riot, they find that soldiers and sailors in uniform have been admitted free of charge.

ROCKS and sailors go hand in hand. The U. S. Navy is still fighting the war from the orchestra circle and first balcony. But even a sea going gob, who carries his sweetheart's picture with only four undershirts separating it from his heart, is never object to a bimbo singing German opera. You can chirp that stuff all night without saying anything. Which is the idea of liverwurst opera and diplomacy. You don't say anything and you say it loud.

IF a triple-chinned lobb hops out and sings "Deutchland over all, Deutchland over all," he aint doing anything but advertising overalls. By discouraging him you gum the opera, empty the theatre and fix the works up just right to be turned into a glue factory. Between glue and meat loaf opera, we'll take vanilla. If Wagner were alive now, he would write all his orchestration on police whistles.

INSTEAD of programs the German opera ushers distribute nimble little booklets wising you up on first aid, what to do until the doctor arrives and how to turn a bow necktie into a tourniquet. A thin dime dropped into the candy vending machine will furnish you with a chocolate coated hot water bag, which will take the swelling out of a black eye.

RIOTING at onion sandwich operas should stop. It throws a lot of Uber Alles out of work, and there's enough of 'em writing books now.

A GUY got up in a box the other night at the opening performance of "Zar tind Zimmermann" and tossed an uncooked omelette at the foreman of the chorus. It is all right to grouch, but an egg is an egg. Even Coal Oil Johnny, at his best, never used an egg for anything but an acting prop-poses. Just then Zimm was singing with his hand over his heart like a guy reaching for his draft card, along comes the egg and knocks him bowlegged. Then the mob gets after him at the end and runs him out. He didn't have an Armenian's chance. After smearing him with the egg some guy with a torch wanted to fry the egg. The gallery also laid a few eggs on the performance. It was some ballyhoo. After two hours' work with their slapsticks the bulls managed to bring disorder out of chaos.

AT future Heinie operas the programs will be printed after the show as the Saengerbund can't tell what will happen in the theatre until it is all over. This is the same company that sang before the Kaiser, and from the direction they were stepping, they should be singing before him again about Tuesday.

HINGHAM HIGH BEATEN BY TOUCHDOWN AND GOAL

Hingham, Oct. 25.—Whitman High School defeated Hingham High School at the Hingham Centre Playgrounds, 7 to 0. In the first period, Walton made an end run of 40 yards. Then two passes netted 20 yards. The ball was carried across by Millett.

ENGLISH HIGH BEATS MECHANIC ARTS, 44 TO 0

English High defeated Mechanic Arts High, 44 to 0, in the Boston High School League series at the Fenway Park.

Sam Anderson, former middleweight wrestling champion, has been engaged to act as coach of the Harvard team. He will also act as instructor to the men engaged in freshman athletics.

Besides the Harvard-Virginia contest in the Stadium the athletic program on Soldiers Field included a football game between the Harvard freshmen and Phillips Exeter Academy, and a soccer match between Harvard and Phillips Andover.

New Haven, Oct. 25.—Although hampered by the loss of Neville, Brandon, Murphy, Lay and Captain Callahan, Yale expected to beat Tufts.

Yale lined up against Tufts with only two of the six Y-man nucleus which started the season—Allen at end and Galt at right guard.

In practice Kempton threw several long passes to Allen and Reinhardt while Crane's and French's short passes to Kempton were executed well.

Joe Neville, with his right arm in perfect brace, was in the field in uniform, but did nothing but punt in Hoh Lay and Chester Larocke. Lay is almost in condition again and can be used when needed.

Captain Callahan's muscle bruise above his left knee is no longer bothering him. He will surely play the Brown game and may play Maryland next week.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 25.—Good Army record supreme among the Boston College players when they lined up against the Army eleven on the Plains today.

The supporters of Old Ex faced West Pointers minus the services of Tom Scanlan, who was injured in the Yale game. He accompanied the team, but watched the game from the sidelines. Ted Madden substituted at fullback.

Before the game the Army football men went through a light workout. There was no scrimmaging but the punters, McQuarrie, Clarke, Lystad and Warren, were sent through a kicking drill with the forwards going down under the ball, and the varsity was given signal practice. Although Breidster was out of the line, the guard position was cared for by Bryan.

EVERETT AND MEDFORD CLASH IN BIG GAME

The Suburban League games were the only ones to be played near the city today, all the other teams playing out of town. All the city league teams were in action, with the exception of English and M. A. H. S. There were three North Shore League games, two Suburban League games, two college freshmen teams meeting prep schools, and over twenty high schools and private schools were represented in teams today.

The game between Medford and Everett at the latter's home grounds was considered the most interesting of the day. While Everett was the favorite by a slight margin, the game was expected to be a close fight. A win for the Everett team would put them in a secure place in the league standing, as they have but one more comparatively easy games remaining while Malden, the closest rival, has two hard games to play with Somerville and Medford on the schedule. The game on November 13 between Malden and Everett will be the game which will decide the championship of the Suburban League.

Brookline and Ridge furnished the leading game at Town Field. The teams were evenly matched. Newton at Somerville and Malden at Ridge were the other two games on the schedule.

The High School of Commerce, Dorchester High, Boston Latin and Boston College High played out of town.

COCHRAN MAKES RECORD RUN WITH CUE

Scores 265 in Unfinished Tenth Inning of 18.2 Game With George F. Slosson

New York, Oct. 25.—For nine innings Walter Cochran, the boy cueist of Detroit, played only ordinary billiards against George F. Slosson, the veteran of the 18.2-inch balkline championship tournament now in progress in the grand ball room of the Astor Hotel.

Then in the tenth inning the youthful Cochran finding the balls in close position, kept clicking off point after point with rapidity and before he stopped, or rather when the game came to an end he was the owner of a high run of 265.

NEW WORLD'S RECORD.

This run establishes a new world's record for championship play. It shatters the record run of 240 made by Slosson in 1915. This veteran's Frenchman in Paris away back in 1885. Willie Hoppe made a high run of 232 in a handicap tournament held in this city several years ago, and Slosson made a run in a tournament held in Chicago in 1907.

As for the outcome of the game, Cochran's total was 500 points to 311. His other high runs were 45 and 40, and his average was 45.466. After making his high run of 45, he scored only five points in his next two innings and appeared to be playing far below his usual form.

NURSED HORSES.

Then came the tenth inning. The cueists were closely bunched, but Cochran could not been pocket at his best and the small crowd had no expectations of seeing a record high run made by the Michigan youngster. Cochran began his long run by nursing the balls carefully and then after getting the balls in close position he finally made a few points at each touch of his cue.

Slosson and there he was forced to use a masse or a draw shot to continue his run. On his 151st shot the globules were in such a position that he made one of a dead ball drive the length of the table and caromed on the other two balls behind. The balls behaved badly for a while after this and he was compelled to make several safeties.

Kiki Yamada, the expert from Japan defeated Frank Taberski of Chicago in the score of 400 to 300. Hoppe scored his fifth consecutive victory when he defeated Slosson, 400 to 138.

Stocks Close Weak in Both Markets; Washington News and Labor Outlook Cause Reaction

PRICES SAGGED FROM START TO FINISH

Steels and Oils Are Prominent in a Downward Movement

By W. H. RC'S.
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at the close, final prices being near the bottom. The recessional which began when the market opened was not checked by a rebound during the morning. Trading was active for a Saturday and dominated by the bears.

U. S. steel was off 2⅞ at 102⅝ at the close, while other leaders were included Retail Rys. 2⅞ at 113⅝; Reading 2⅛ at 148; Mexican Petroleum 6⅝ at 74½; American Tobacco 6⅝ at 205½, Texas Co. 5 at 202, Republic Steel 4⅞ at 93, Baldwin 4⅜ at 133, Bethlehem Steel 4⅜ at 142½ and General Motors 4 at 276½.

In foreign exchange market sterling demand was a little higher at the opening with cables unchanged, as were francs. Lire rates were a shade lower.

PRICES LOWER AT OPENING.

Offerings exceeded demand to a considerable extent at the opening change against and prices dropped from fractions to five points or more. Steels, oils and equipments being weak. Rubbers were relatively firm and the rest of the list was more or less irregular, with alterations small and generally within a point. A week-end profits and there was no general disposition to evening commitments. Absence of any change in the labor situation is considered ominous and the latest news from Washington is unsatisfactory to interests who approved of the peace treaty at first presented. The stock market may prove a critical period in the country's history. In banking and business circles there is unwillingness to go slow and await developments.

LARGER SUPPLY OF STOCKS

The public is less inclined to speculate. Most operations have become more distressed. But it is remarked that considering the extent of recent liquidation the market has displayed great fundamental strength. Rubber, oil and tobacco stocks are most in favor at present.

The market declined steadily during the first hour and issues whose largest losses included Mexican Petroleum, Pan-American, International Corporation, Atlantic Gulf, American Locomotive, Baldwin, Bethlehem B, Crucible, Republic Steel, Central Leather, Ride and Leather preferred, Chandler, Studebaker, Pierce Arrow, Corn Products and Lackawanna Steel. Around 11 o'clock they had receded from two to six points, oils being the weakest class. Rails were less active and heavy, Southern Pacific, Reading and New Haven being off more than a point. General Motors was strong, however. Middle States Oil retained only a fraction of a five-point gain.

PRICES LOWER ON BOSTON EXCHANGE

Few Issues Advance During Morning, But Declines Are the Rule

The Boston market was rather weak at the opening, most active issues starting with declines and it developed no rallying power during the forenoon. Utah Copper was the only feature, advancing two points before mid-morning and being more active than for some time. Pond Creek was another strong stock on the list, while Amoskeag, Lawyers Mortgage and packing shares were all weak. Trading had few features. It was not as broad as usual, but there was considerable business for a week-end session in a number of stocks.

Firms which were the most included Stewart, Root & Van Dervoort, Parker & Hemenway, Edmund Seaverns, Jones & Baker, Bowling and New Haven. They were all off one to two points. Other firms which were established by Libby, Swift & Co., Gray & Davis, Mullins Body, Elder, National Leather, Coal Belle, Davis-Daly and United Shoe.

Among stocks to advance were Arizona Commercial, Calumet & Hecla, Old Dominion, Punta Alegre and American Sugar common, the latter a series of unofficial fractions, exceeding the last named.

There was very little speculation in coppers.

Raw Sugar Price Advancing

It is believed in the trade that Cuban raw sugar for December shipment will bring 8 cents a pound soon if not at present. The quotation is 7¾ cents a pound. There will be little of the new crop available for that month, although mills in Cuba are making every effort to begin grinding early. Strikes have delayed the receipt of new machinery and supplies at mills.

Boston Elevated Receipts

People who walked in preference to paying a ten-cent fare are returning to the cars. There will be Elevated road receipts are an index. It is understood the road has been taking as much as $100,000 for fares on Saturdays and approximately $100,000 on other days. This means that more than a million Bostonians are riding daily.

Foreign Trade Figures

This country's exports exceeded its imports during September this year by $158,000,000, while the excess for nine months was $3,165,000,000.

Cotton Ginning

Washington, Oct. 25.—The Census Bureau's report places the amount of cotton ginned from the growth of the crop of 1919 prior to October 18 at 6,870,443 running bales, excluding linters, against 4,811,801 bales in the same time in 1918 and 5,378,008 bales in 1917.

PREDICT BOOM FOR BOSTON SHIPPING

Despite the fact that most of the passenger ships which served the port of Boston in the Summer of 1914 have either gone to the bottom or have been converted into transports by the government, and that overseas passenger traffic from this port is at a very low ebb, shipping men say that the shipping outlook for the port in the long-term is one of hope.

New foreign steamship lines are being announced almost weekly, and the satisfying element in these announcements is that a good share of them are made by Boston shipping houses.

C. H. Sprague & Son not only sent the first ship to the port of Hamburg after the war, but they recently announced the establishment of a regular American line to Black Sea ports in Rumania and, probably, Russia when that country settles down.

The Paragon Shipping Company and John S. Emery & Co. both announce lines to South America. The latter company is building a fleet of ten big steamers on the Pacific coast and will have a first class service between Boston and Pacific ports, including Honolulu.

The foreign shipping companies which operated services out of here are heading their efforts to secure tonnage sufficient to re-establish themselves here. The Cunard Company's announcement that the Cunard and Anchor lines, to Liverpool and Glasgow, respectively, would put on at least four passenger steamers next Spring, the equals of the best that ever served the port of Boston, was an indication of what the British companies are doing.

The Cunard Company is now operating a line of freighters to Liverpool and the Anchor line, a Cunard subsidiary, is robbing its East India service of passenger ships to send them to Boston. The Cunard Company has also established a Boston service to Australia, in competition with the Emery line.

The International Mercantile Marine Company has resumed its Leyland line service to Liverpool, its White Star line service to the Mediterranean and its Red Star line service to Antwerp. No passenger ships are available for the White Star service. It is probable that the White Star line service to Liverpool will soon be resumed.

Representatives of four different Japanese steamship companies have been in Boston recently. It is not improbable that announcements of Japanese lines, via both the Suez and Panama canals, will be made as soon as ships are available.

Gradually, the British companies that sent steamships to Boston from the Far East, the Barber line, the Houston line, the Norton line and others, are restoring their services and will increase them as ships become available, and the American shipping firms may be expected to reach out into this field, also.

The Wicked Marquis

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Love and Revenge Centre About an Agreeable English Aristocrat of the Old School

What Has Happened

The Marquis of Mandeleys, an English nobleman of a type of days gone by, finds himself nearly bankrupt from law cases against Richard Vont, the occupant of a cottage on his estate who refuses to vacate his own property. The Marquis' solicitor informs him that the sum of eighteen thousand pounds is needed to settle the court bills and that it would be useless to make another appeal even to the House of Lords. David Thain, a young American millionaire, protege of the Duchess, is introduced to the Marquis. The Marquis relates to Thain how he took the daughter of Vont away with him. Thain is given a dinner party, after which the Marquis tells Thain he would like to make a million dollars without trouble to himself and with no chance of loss. Thain suggests oil stock. Marcia, Vont's daughter, tells her publisher, James Borden, that she cannot marry him. The Marquis tells his solicitor that he has bought 40,000 pounds worth of oil shares. Thain leases an estate from the Marquis near Mandeleys.

CHAPTER XII.

THE Duchess waved her sugar tongs imperiously, and David, who had hesitated upon the threshold of her drawing-room, made his way towards her. There were a dozen people sitting around, drinking tea and chatting in little groups.

"Now don't look sulky, please," she begged, as she gave him her left hand. "This is not a tea party, and it is quite true that I did ask you to come and have a chat with me alone, but I couldn't keep these people away. They'll all go directly, and if they don't I shall turn them out. Letitia has promised me to take care of you and see that no one bites. Letitia, here is the shy man," she added. "There!"—thrusting a cup of tea into his hand. "Take that, help yourself to a muffin and go and hide behind the piano."

Letitia rose from her place by the side of an extremely loquacious politician, to whom animated conversation she had paid no attention since David's entrance.

"You hear my mistress' orders?" she said, nodding. "Don't try to shake hands, with that collection of things to carry. I am to pilot you into a corner and keep you quite safe until she is ready to take possession of you herself."

David looked longingly at some French windows which led out to a wide stone terrace.

"Why not outside?" he suggested. "It's really quite warm today."

"Why not, indeed" she assented. "Come along."

They passed out together, found two comfortable wicker chairs and a small table, on which, with a sigh of relief, David deposited his burden. Below them was a stretch of the park, from which they themselves were screened by a row of tall trees.

"Don't sit down," she begged him. "Get me another of those small muffins first, and a cup of tea. If any one suggests coming out here, bolt the windows after you."

David executed his task as speedily as possible. Letitia watched him a little curiously as he returned.

"You aren't really a bit shy, you know," she told him. "I watched you through the window there. How clever you were not to see that tiresome Mrs. Raymond!"

"Why should I see her?" he asked. "She is a perfect stranger to me. She came up to me at a party, the other night, and asked me, as a great favor, to dine at her house and to tell her how to invest some money so that she could double it."

"I know," Letitia assented, with her mouth full of muffin. "She does that to all her financiers and expects them to give her tips just because she has dark eyes and asks them to a tete-a-tete dinner. I expect we are all as bad, though," she went on rather gloomily, "even if we are not quite so blatant. What on earth have you been doing to father? He swaggers about as if he were already a millionaire."

David Smiled

David sifted a little sadly as he looked out above the tree tops.

"Your father has a rather sanguine temperament," he said.

"Well, don't encourage him to speculate, please," Letitia begged. "We couldn't afford to lose a single penny. As it is," she went on, "we are only able to come to Mandeleys because you've taken that ramshackle old barn close by and paid twice as much as its worth. About the shooting, too! I almost laughed aloud when you mentioned it! Do you know, Mr. Thain, that we haven't reared a pheasant for years, and that we don't even feed the wild ones?"

"What about the partridges, though," he reminded her, "and the hares? I talked to a farmer when I was down there the other day, and he complained bitterly that there was only one vermin-killer on the whole estate and that the place was swarming with rabbits. I rather enjoy rabbit shooting."

"Oh, well, so long as you understand," Letitia replied, with a little shrug of her shoulders, "take the shoot, for goodness' sake, and pay dad as much as he chooses to ask for it. I've always noticed," she went on reflectively, "one extraordinary thing about people who haven't the faintest idea of business. They are always much cleverer than a real business man in asking over so much more than a thing is worth. A person with a sense of proportion, you see, couldn't do it."

"One would imagine," he complained, "that you were trying to keep me away from Mendeleys."

"Don't, please, imagine such a thing," she begged earnestly, "if there is anything I hate, it's London—or rather hate the way we have to live here. You are entirely our salvation. If you desert us now, I shall be the most miserable person alive. Only, you see, I know what father is, and what you do you must do with your eyes open."

He was silent for a moment. The echo of her words lingered in his ears. He moved a little uneasily in his place, more uneasily still when he found that she was watching him intently.

"You are really a very mysterious person, Mr. Thain," she declared, with a note of curiosity in her tone. "I hear that you decline to be interviewed, and you won't even tell the newspapers whether this is your first visit to England or not."

"I don't see what business it is of the newspapers," he rejoined. "I am not a person of any possible interest to any one. I have done nothing except make a great deal of money. That, too, was purely a matter of luck. I am not even far sighted. In America," he went on, "one expects to meet with that personal curiosity. Over here, I must say that it surprises me."

Enormous Power

"I suppose you are right," she admitted, "but, you see, under the present conditions of living, the possession of money does give such enormous power to any one. Then you must remember that our press has become Americanized lately. However, I am not a journalist, so will you answer me one question?"

"Certainly," he replied.

"Have you ever been in England before?"

"Once."

"Long ago?"

"A great many years ago."

"I don't really know why I am curious," she went on thoughtfully, "but there was a time, when I saw you first—doesn't this sound hackneyed, but it's quite true—when I fancied that I'd seen you before. It worried me for days. Even now it sometimes perplexes me."

He hated the lie which had risen so steadily to his lips and choked it back.

"A dear lady, a friend of the Duchess, made the same remark to me when we were introduced," he said. "She excused herself gracefully by saying that people were so much alike, nowadays."

"I don't think that you are particularly like other people," she observed, studying him. "Would you like to hear what Ada Honeywell thinks about you?"

"So long as it leaves me still able to hold up my head," he murmured. "Mrs. Honeywell struck me as being rather severe in her strictures."

"It was only of your appearance she was speaking," Letitia continued. "She said that she could see three things in your face—a Franciscan monk, a head maitre d'hotel at the most select of French restaurants, and the modern decadent criminal, as opposed to the Charles Peace type."

"I am much obliged, I'm sure," he remarked, leaning back and laughing for once quite naturally. "My type of criminal, I presume, is one who brings art to his aid in working out his nefarious schemes."

"Precisely," she murmured. "Like Wainwright, the poisoner, or the Borgias. But at any rate we agreed upon something. There is purpose in your face."

"You speak as though that were unusual! I suppose we all have a set course in life."

She nodded.

"And a great deal depends upon that goal, doesn't it?"

There was a brief—to David, an enigmatic pause. Letitia's questions had puzzled him. She might almost have suspected his identity. They both listened idly for a few moments to the music of a violin, which some one was playing in the drawing-room.

"You've asked me a great many questions," he said abruptly. "What about you? What is your goal?"

"My dear Mr. Thain," she replied, "how can you ask! I am an impeculous young woman of luxurious tastes. It is my purpose to entrap somebody with a comfortable income into marrying me. I have been at it for several seasons." She went on a little dolefully, "but so far Charles Grantham is my only certainty, and he wobbles sometimes—especially when he sees anything of Sylvia Laycey."

Charming Girl

Sylvia Laycey," he repeated. "Is she the daughter of the present tenant of Broomleys?"

Letitia nodded.

"And a very charming girl, too," she declared. "You'll most certainly fall in love with her. Everybody does when she comes up to stay with me."

"Falling in love isn't one of my ordinary amusements," he observed a little drily.

"Superior person!" she mocked.

The Duchess suddenly appeared upon the balcony.

"Look here," she said, "there's been quite enough of this. Mr. Thain came especially to see me. Every one else has gone."

"I wonder if that might be considered a hint," Letitia observed, glancing at the watch upon her wrist. "All right, aunt, I'll go. You wouldn't believe, Mr. Thain," she added, buttoning her gloves, "that one's relations are supposed to be a help to one in life?"

"You're only wasting you time with Mr. Thain, dear," her aunt replied equably. "I've studied his character. We were eight days on that steamer, you know, and all the musical comedy young ladies in the world seemed to be on board, and I can give you my word that Mr. Thain is a woman-hater."

"I am really more interested in him now than I have ever been before," Letitia declared, laughing into his eyes. "My great grievance with Charlie Grantham is that he cannot keep away from our hated rivals in the other world. However, you'll talk to me again, won't you, Mr. Thain?"

CHAPTER LXX.

Copyright, 1919, Star Company.

DAVID SMITH DE LAINE sat in the office of Henry Andrews, giving courteous heed to what the lawyer was saying about stocks, bonds and other investments. David hoped he seemed to understand all that was said.

Outwardly he was calm, but inwardly his mind was in a turmoil.

It was almost an hour since the truth had been communicated to him, he reflected, glancing at the clock on the desk near which he sat. An hour since he had been told that his uncle, Francis De Laine, in dying had left a large fortune, and that he, David Smith De Laine, was the only heir.

"Mr. Francis De Laine had made no regular will," the lawyer had explained. "But, strange to say, only a few weeks ago he wrote to me about a little business transaction I had with him years ago. In that letter he told me that he was not well, and said he supposed that when he died his brother's son would be his heir. He added that the law would make a good enough will for him, and that, although he knew little about you, he supposed you were all right—that he got what he went West to get, and cared very little what became of it after he was dead. He was very eccentric, you know."

"Yes, so I have heard my aunt say," David replied.

He was glad he could speak a short sentence sedately. He started now as Andrews turned to him with—

"I hope I make all these matters plain to you, Mr. De Laine?"

"Oh—ah—yes, I hope so," he said with a half smile. "To tell the truth, Mr. Andrews, I can scarcely grasp what all this means. But I want to put my affairs in your hands—and later I hope to be more clear-headed than I am today."

Henry Andrews flushed with pleasure. "I thank you, Mr. De Laine! I shall do my best by your—as it was always my pleasure to do by your aunt. I feel honored that you and she should repose so much confidence in me. And I congratulate you on the acquisition of this fortune, my dear sir. I only wish that your aunt could have known of it."

"Perhaps she does know now," the young man remarked gravely.

Still in the Air

But the lawyer was not given to speculations on the state of those who had passed from mortal sight, so he changed the subject.

"You know that the matter of the settlement of your aunt's estate must hang fire for some time to come. You are her possible heir until two years after her death. Then, if you have not complied with the terms she named, the property passes to various charities."

"Yes, I know," David said quickly. "I authorize you to pass it on now—as far as I am concerned."

Andrews shook his head. "That is something you have nothing to do with, my dear sir. Unless (with a meaning smile) you intend to comply with your aunt's request."

David flushed hotly. "My aunt was aware that I had never met the young lady in question when she made that will," he said. "I cannot understand her suggesting such an arrangement."

"Well, she had an eccentric streak in her make-up, as her brother Francis had—if you will allow me to speak frankly. I may add that I have never seen a sign of it in you—except (with a little laugh) in your neglecting to meet the girl of whom your aunt was so fond. I understand that she is very lovely."

"I have no doubt of it," was the reply. "But the fact that my aunt was determined to throw me at her head was enough to make me wish to save the poor young lady the trouble of dodging."

His frank, strange delight in talking of this girl whom he loved to a man who did not suspect that he had ever seen her.

"Well," the lawyer said, confidentially, "there is now no harm in my telling you that your dear aunt—complained to me that Miss Leighton seemed quite as averse to meeting you as you were to meeting her."

"Ah?"

The interrogative exclamation was non-committal, but it was the very word that David could say at that instant. Then he added lamely and with an effort at a laugh:

"I can hardly blame her."

He Thanks the Lawyer

After listening to a few more remarks on business matters, David arose and held out his hand.

"I thank you very sincerely for the trouble you are taking for me, Mr. Andrews," he said.

He had never had a lawyer before and did not know if this was the kind of thing one should say to his legal adviser. Yet he did feel grateful to him.

"What are your plans for the Winter—if it is not impertinent to ask?" Andrews questioned.

"To tell the truth," David confessed, I do not know. I have made none."

"Why not take a run out West and look over some of your uncle's property there? You know you can well afford to travel now"—with a smile—"and it would undoubtedly complete your reputation for eccentricity although if you are not entirely well now appearances are certainly deceptive."

"I might go West," David rejoined. "I must think it over—must take a few days in which to learn to believe that I am a man of property who can go and come as he pleases. But I must not get lazy."

"If you look after your investments you will have enough to do to keep you out of mischief," Andrews assured him. "Good day!"

David returned to his hotel thinking deeply. But what was uppermost in his mind was not his newly-acquired wealth, but the fact that Desiree had been as anxious to avoid seeing him in bygone days as he had been to avoid seeing her.

Anecdotes of the Famous

It was the custom of Whistler when drowsy to go deliberately to sleep, no matter where he was or what the circumstances might be. At a dinner party his gentle snore suddenly aroused his neighbor, who nudged him violently with his elbow.

"I say, Whistler," he protested excitedly, "you must not sleep here!"

"Leave me alone" snapped Whistler. "I've said all I wanted to. I've no interest at all in what you or your friends have to say."

One evening he was a guest at a hotel, as was Edwin A. Abbey, and immediately after the dinner was served went calmly to sleep. On the way to the theatre he had another nap in the cab. He also slumbered peacefully through the play. The next morning he blandly asked:

"What did Abbey have to say last night? Anything worth while?"

Getting What You Want in Life

Copyright, 1919, by The Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

"DOESN'T being out on a day like this make you feel like a god or goddess, or a wizard, or a king?" exclaimed the Bachelor, stretching luxuriously, as he led the way from the motor-car to the path of scarlet and gold, that wound through the wood. "Just sort of 'peppy' . . . as though you could take, or be, or do anything in the world you wanted!"

"You can," announced the Widow, authoritatively, as she snuggled her small gloved hands down into her spacious pockets.

"Hark! The woodnymph speaks!" and the Bachelor looked down at her, with that masculine air of indulgence, so like a Newfoundland dog regarding the cute little tricks of a kitten. "Are you going to grant me three wishes, Dame Fairy—if I cross your palm with silver?"

"Isn't that just like a man!" The Widow shook her bright head impatiently. "Give him a grain of hope and he'll raise a whole crop of expectations. I offered you ONE wish, Mr. Catling. You can have any one thing that you want most on earth—and what's more, you HAVE it, already!"

"What!" The Bachelor gazed at her in astonishment, not unmixed with apprehension. "You don't mean to say that I've put—that you've decided—are you proposing marriage to me?" he finished bluntly.

"Not this afternoon," answered the Widow with frigid sweetness. "If what you wanted most in the world were a wife, you'd have had at least one, ages ago! You only THINK you want to marry. What you really want most is the chance to go about telling everybody how lonely you are, and pitying yourself, and thinking about marriage—in the abstract. There is nothing quite so intriguing to a man as flirting with the IDEA of marriage—with his fingers crossed!"

"I know what I want!" declared the Bachelor doggedly.

"No, you don't," retorted the Widow. "Nobody knows what he really wants. Yet, everybody gets what he wants most—and then goes through life, feeling cheated and disappointed, because he thinks he wants something else."

"Just like a chap I know," chimed in the Bachelor, "who thinks he wants to be a money magnate, and sits around all day working up get-rich-quick schemes and telling people about them, instead of getting a job and working AT it."

"But he gets what he really wants!" insisted the Widow, "which is all we ever do get through life especially thinking he has missed the thing he wants—because he doesn't happen to be willing to pay the price for it!"

"And the price increases as you go on through life!" groaned the Bachelor. "If we could only pay it all in spot cash! But it's the interminable daily installments that weary us so!"

"And yet you talk to me about wanting to marry!" said the Widow, reproachfully.

"Well, isn't that what I really want?"

"What?"

"To TALK about wanting to marry," the Bachelor explained, hastily, "but what I THINK I want most of anything in the world at this minute is——" The Bachelor hesitated and looked down at the Widow doubtfully.

"Yes?" inquired the Widow, tilting her chin and returning his gaze with an icy smile of challenge.

"What I think I want," he repeated lamely, forcing himself to turn his eyes away from her lips, "is luncheon!"

"Oh!"

And for some reason, as they turned their steps toward the clubhouse veranda, the Widow looked almost disappointed.

How the Tague-Fitzgerald Fight Stands Now

The people of Massachusetts ought to know the situation in the Tague-Fitzgerald contest as it is now left by the final decision of the House of Representatives giving Mr. Tague the seat.

The important charges of fraud upon which Mr. Tague originally relied were not sustained by the evidence and were not found to be sustained by the House Committee which made the investigation. Mr. Tague was seated and Mr. Fitzgerald was deprived of his seat because the Committee threw out certain precincts in Ward 5 upon the ground that there was evidence, admittedly not conclusive, that a certain number of those who voted in that precinct did not live there. As Congressman Luce, a member of the Committee, declared, there was no evidence indicating whether those voters cast their ballot for Mr. Tague or Mr. Fitzgerald, but if the votes of the whole precinct were thrown out, Mr. Tague would have a plurality of the votes in the entire district.

In the judgment of the American this was a high-handed, unjustifiable act disfranchising a large number of honest citizens whose right to vote has not and could not be challenged. The majority of the Massachusetts Congressmen voting on the question were perfectly right in opposing this act disfranchising so large a number of citizens. Mr. Luce said that Mr. Tague ought, not to be allowed to take advantage of a condition which existed when Mr. Lomasney was supporting Mr. Tague's political ambitions and which he did not then challenge, but which Mr. Tague must admit that he profited by, since he now contends that Mr. Fitzgerald profited by it in the last election. However, it is human nature that Mr. Tague should take advantage of what opportunities those who were anxious to do a good "job" on Mr. Fitzgerald gave him in the situation.

Mr. Tague's attack upon Mr. Lomasney at the close of the discussion undoubtedly gave him his seat. But Mr. Lomasney will not suffer among those who know him by reason of that attack. To accuse Mr. Lomasney of being a pro-German was really beneath Mr. Tague. We had a higher opinion of Mr. Tague than this. Mr. Tague knows that Mr. Lomasney was not pro-German. He knows that he was just intensely, fervently, mindful of the wrong which the land of his fathers had suffered at the hands of the nation whom we were asked to save. He knew that if Germany won that Ireland would be free, not because the Germans loved the Irish, or loved freedom, or wanted to set up free nations anywhere, but just as the English and the French have set up Poland, Lithuania, Esthonia and Czecho-Slovakia, because they wanted to weaken Germany and Austria-Hungary, so Germany and Austria-Hungary would have set up an independent Ireland in order to weaken the British Empire. Mr. Lomasney's political perspicacity enabled him to see that a declaration of war by the United States upon Germany meant the saving of Great Britain and the death knell of the chance which Ireland then had to be freed as a result of the British defeat. Mr. Tague does not say that Mr. Lomasney wanted him not to vote for war. Even if what Mr. Tague says was true, all it amounts to is that Mr. Lomasney wanted him to find out what it was proposed to do for Ireland in case we won, as we would win, and thus the chance that Ireland then had for her independence through British defeat should be lost.

No intelligent man denies the wrongs of Ireland, and least of all, the British historians. No intelligent man will deny that the right of self-determination is applicable to Ireland. No intelligent man could, at the time of our entering the war, have denied that the objects which we were professing—namely, "to make the world safe for democracy"—included justice to Ireland. But Mr. Lomasney has been a practical man in the game of American politics for forty years, and he has learned something about "GENERALITIES" in American politics and consequently he, so Mr. Tague says, wanted Mr. Tague to take advantage of the dramatic moment when the President was calling the nation to arms, in a great crusade to make the world safe for democracy, to demand SPECIFICALLY what it was proposed to do for Ireland, one of the most oppressed countries in the world at that moment, and oppressed by the nations which were proposing to save from destruction and whose destruction would have given Ireland her freedom.

Have not events justified Mr. Lomasney's caution? Ireland's chance of freedom through British defeat is gone by the aid we brought her and now it is proposed that we shall, by the League of Nations, help Britain to keep Ireland down.

Mr. Tague is a good man and a good Democrat. The American has often spoken warmly of him and does not withdraw a word it has spoken. But the result of this singular contest is that while Mr. Tague gets his seat, Mr. Fitzgerald gets an absolutely clean bill of health on the charge of fraud—and Mr. Lomasney is proved to have a statesman-like vision that reaches far down beyond the horizon of wards or congressional districts.

DON'T BRAG TOO MUCH OF YOUR GOOD LUCK

Which would you rather have, the gain or the name?

There are a good many persons who would be shown little attentions and favors by others if it were not for their bragging spirit which just cannot keep still about the good things they enjoy.

Now it is fine to see a person who is happy and joyous and satisfied with everything that he or she possesses or falls heir to, but it is very obnoxious to the one who has struggled and persistently sought after a certain thing to hear another bragging about just that possession.

Furthermore, there is nothing which so reacts against the possessor as this very spirit.

Enthusiasm in an exaggerated form is apt to be mistaken for this spirit.

So these enthusiastic ones should be careful in their exuberant spirits, and thoughtful of the feelings of others.

The enthusiast is generous and wants others to have the same reasons for rejoicing.

The braggart is selfish and wants exclusive right and takes pleasure in seeing it in the face of everybody.
